U. S. Decides On War Show By Fleet Off Pacific Coast

Massing of Armada to Coincide With Tokyo's Parity Demands.

Swanson Denies 'Threat' Implied

Ships Due to Arrive in December, Stage Maneuvers Later.

By Elliott Thurston.

The Navy will stage one of its greatest exhibitions of massed force in the northern Pacific next summer.

The display of naval power, simulating actual attack upon the American coast, will coincide with final efforts to reconcile Japanese demands for increased naval strength, if not for outright parity, with British-American insistence upon continuation of the 5-5-3 ratios established by the Washington treaties.

Secretary of the Navy Swanson yesterday announced the plan to concentrate the American Fleet in the Pacific for maneuvers next summer. He made no reference to its probable effect upon Japan, nor from any other official quarter is there acknowledgment of the fact that the probable sequel will be a renewal of the Japanese charge that the presence of the American Fleet in the Pacific is tantamount to a threat or an attempt to intimidate her.

Held in Line With Policy.

On the contrary, the Secretary insisted the staging of maneuvers at that time and place "is in line with the Navy's policy of holding fleet problems and fleet concentrations in the various areas contiguous to American territorial waters."

In a formal announcement, he said:

"The United States Fleet, under the command of Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, U. S. N., left Hampton Roads last Saturday for technical exercises and maneuvers. The different units of the fleet will put into Gulf ports next Monday for a week's visit, after which they will concentrate in the Guantanamo-Genaives area for gunnery exercises.

"Since the fleet review in New York on May 31, the ships of the battle force and scouting force have visited practically every port along the Atlantic seaboard from Miami to Florida. This forthcoming visit to Gulf ports will wind up the cruise on this coast.

Date of Arrival Withheld.

"No definite date has been settled for the fleet's arrival on the West Coast, but I believe they are expected to arrive on the San Pedro-San Diego area before December 1. All the ships will remain on the West Coast next year, and the fleet maneuvers will take place next summer on what we call the Puget

Shot Dents Car Of School Head

Link With Speer's Death Seen in Attack on Fellow Educator.

Northfield, Mass., Sept. 19 (AP).—A highway attack on a fellow educator tonight deepened the mystery and fear surrounding the slaying of Elliot Speer, headmaster of Mount Hermon School here.

Dr. William H. Buker, superintendent of the school union of the nearby communities of Shelburne, Colrain and Buckland, reported to authorities late today a shot had been fired at him while he was driving his automobile between Shelburne and Shelburne Falls this afternoon.

He displayed a sharp indentation on the right front of his car just above the windshield, where the supposed shot struck.

State police working on the Speer case here assisted in the investigation and admitted indications were that the fatal shooting of the private school head and the attack on Buker may have been connected.

Speer was shot down in his study Friday night by an unseen assailant who fired a 12-guage shotgun through a window. Authorities have expressed the fear it might be a "perfect crime" because so far no tangible clews to the identity of the slayer have been uncovered.

Insurance Plan Dropped For Dionne Quintuplets

Callander, Ontario, Sept. 19 (AP).—W. H. Alderson, spokesman for the Canadian Red Cross Society, and guardians of the Dionne quintuplet sisters, said today all negotiations looking toward insurance for the 113-day-old infants had been canceled.

He said the guardians had done no more than inquire of an insurance company what the rates would be for maximum protection for the children. All five children, recently ill with toxemia, gained weight today.

Anti-Japanese Raiders Bomb Arizona Farms

Violence Flares in War on Aliens; Nipponese Protest to Consul.

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 19 (AP).—Dynamite charges were exploded on three Japanese-operated farms in the Salt River Valley early today. Authorities intimated the explosions evidenced a recurrence of feeling by white farmers who recently complained Nipponese were operating in violation of the State alien land law.

One blast blew up the flood gate of an irrigation ditch and 20 acres of land inundated.

On farms operated by Fred Okuma and R. Asano, the explosions occurred between 80 and 100 feet from their dwellings. One blast also was reported to have damaged slightly the home of R. Sugino.

The Rev. Junro A. Kashatani, a leader among Japanese residents, said reports of the explosions had been made to the Japanese consul at Los Angeles, who had promised to protest to Washington and to send an account of the matter to Tokyo.

Protection Demanded.

Kashatani said he felt the anti-Japanese agitation here had "gone too far" and that definite action would have to be taken "to guard the lives and property of Japanese."

The Maricopa County sheriff's office, conducting an investigation, said the dynamite apparently had been placed in cans and hurled from an automobile in two instances. In the third, where the flood gate was blown up, officers said the dynamite might have been planted and set off with a time fuse.

Last Friday morning George Tadano reported to officers that a group of masked men had pushed his truck into an irrigation canal after firing two shots into the machine. The sheriff's office attributed the attack to "night riders."

Japanese Asked to Leave.

Several weeks ago white farmers of the valley demanded that all Japanese who, they alleged, were

Strike Rioting Flares Again; Rally Ordered

Victim of Bayonet Dies; Meeting Will Protest Interning Pickets.

Rioting broke out again yesterday in Maine and North Carolina as the leaders of the Nation-wide textile strike called a rally to protest internment of Georgia participants.

The thirteenth fatality of the tie-up came with the death in Charlotte, N. C., of Ernest K. Riley, a worker slashed Tuesday by a bayonet. Unionists charged National Guardsmen figuring in the wounding of Riley had been drinking.

Francis J. Gorman, union chairman, announced a mass meeting would be held shortly in New York City to focus public attention on detention of more than 100 strikers in a "barbed-wire-inclosed fortress" near Atlanta.

Skirmish in Maine.

Associated Press dispatches told of a furious two-hour skirmish between 200 pickets and police in Waterville, Me. The workers broke many windows in a Lockwood Manufacturing Co. mill before State militiamen arrived.

A riot of workers at the Powell knitting mill in Spartanburg, S. C., was halted by tear gas and fire hose. Twenty-three union sympathizers were arrested for attempting to block a road to prevent workers from reaching a plant at Lyman, S. C.

Several hundred business leaders in Greenville, S. C., formed

Ship's Bridge Periled Life, Inquiry Told

Engine Room 'Ignored' Command to Whirl Liner About.

4th Officer Questioned on Foul Play Theory in Willmott Death.

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—If obeyed, the last order from the bridge to the engine room of the Morro Castle would have left the flaming Ward liner circling about the ocean, a whirl of death and fire, evidence at the Department of Commerce inquiry showed today.

The engine room crew, however, disobeyed the order and put the engines into neutral.

This testimony was given by an 18-year-old Massachusetts Institute of Technology student, William Wesley Tripp, who was on the tragic voyage from Havana as a cadet engineer.

Reads Copy of Orders.

Tripp, whose praise of the engine room crew was echoed by Dickerson N. Hoover, head of the Steamboat Inspection Service and conductor of the inquiry, read into evidence the copy of orders he scratched down from the bell sheet as the crew down below worked in the intense heat and dense smoke. The last two entries were:

"3:19½—Full speed ahead, port."

"3:21—Full speed astern, starboard."

Tripp said Arthur Stamper, the third engineer, left in charge after his superiors either failed to show up or left the engine room, put the engines in neutral instead.

Had the order been obeyed, the ship would have circled around—with passengers and lifeboats in the water about it—for at least eight minutes.

Says Bridge Was Silent.

The telegraph between the engine room and bridge did not fail, testimony has shown, until 3:29 a. m. (Eastern standard time), when all lights went off.

Between 3:21 and 3:29 there were no further orders from the bridge, according to Tripp's private log, which he gave to the Ward Line and which later was furnished both to Hoover's inquiry and to the Federal grand jury.

Hoover questioned Tripp about conditions in the engine room, apparently seeking to learn if failure to shut off the ventilating system sucked heat and smoke down into the interior of the ship and forced the engine crew to abandon station.

Some of the smoke, Tripp said, came through the ventilators.

There was no fire in the engine room.

Praises Engine Room Crew.

"I think the engine room crew acted splendidly," Tripp said.

"I think so, too," replied Hoover.

Details of the death of Capt. Robert R. Willmott—who suffered an acute attack of indigestion and died only several hours before fire broke out on his liner—were given by Howard Hansen, the fourth officer, who testified he saw no marks of violence on the body.

Rumors have beeen persistent that the master met foul play. The few charred bones found in the cabin where his body was cremated

A hard-bitten 44-year-old cavalry captain rallied his comrades of the United States Army polo team late yesterday afternoon to deal a smashing 11-to-6 defeat to a gallant but outmaneuvered Mexican Army four in the first game of Washington's international series.

Before a brilliant audience of 10,000, generously flecked with dignitaries, Capt. Chester E. (Stub) Davis headed a counter-charge on the goal posts to score six times

Cotton Revolt By Bankhead Hits Own Law

Merriment Rife as All Await Parley Saturday With Wallace.

By Raymond Clapper.

A cotton belt rebellion is on against the drastic Bankhead compulsory cotton control law and there is great possibility that President Roosevelt will suspend the measure.

This rebellion is led by none other than the author of the act, Senator Bankhead, of Alabama, who will appear before Secretary of Agriculture Wallace Saturday with a delegation praying that he do something about it.

There is ill-concealed merriment in the AAA over this situation because the New Dealers there did not want the drastic measure in the first place, fearing it would, as has been the case, put a curse on all of their work. Its offense, in their eyes, was to come out baldly with two-fisted compulsory regimentation while the more astute New Dealers preferred to work tactfully with

Debt Holiday For Farmers Held Illegal

Baltimore Federal Judge Says Mortgage Law Is Confiscatory.

Baltimore, Sept. 19 (AP).—United States District Judge W. Calvin Chesnut today declared the farm mortgage moratorium amendment to the National bankruptcy act unconstitutional, in that its five-year clause discriminates against mortgage creditors in favor of bankrupt farmers.

Judge Chesnut's finding, included in an opinion filed in Federal court here this afternoon, was based largely upon the following two points which he stressed:

1. The amendment removes the protection which the laws of each State give a contracting creditor and doubles the protection given a farmer-debtor—thereby tending to confiscate the property of the creditor in an effort to save the farm of the debtors.

2. The amendment tends to supersede the right retained by each individual State in the operation of its

Parade Crowd in Panic As Circus Lion Escapes

Beatty "Cat" Attacks Horses, Routs Terrified Spectators in Richmond; Is Trapped and Killed After Frenzied Chase.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 19 (Spl.).—The same gay circus parade that cheered young and old in Washington two days ago was turned into a spectacle of terror for hundreds here today as one of Clyde Beatty's young lions tore the door from his wagon cage and ran roaring down one of this city's main thoroughfares.

The lion was Gilbert, a young male beauty that Beatty, one of the best-known animal trainers, had been coaching with hopes of adding him to his Hagenbeck-Wallace circus act within the next two weeks.

Crying in terror, spectators lining both sides of the street, many of them women and small children, ducked into stores or took refuge in distance as Gilbert leaped to the street. It stood for a moment, bewildered at its sudden freedom.

Then it leaped for the throat of the lead horse of the circus truck next in the parade line. Drivers beat it off with cracking whips, but only for a moment. Still bewildered, the "cat" moved first toward one side of the street and then the other. Then it turned back and drove for the neck of another horse, pulling it down and apparently sinking its teeth deep into the animal's throat.

By this time curiosity brought most of the spectators from their points of safety. As they crowded nearer, Patrolman James Richard Paul darted among rearing, terrified horses and emptied his service revolver at the beast.

At least one of the shots took effect, but the lion, roaring rage and defiance, dashed down the boulevard, dragging a wounded leg. The crowd again fled in terror across lots, down streets and into convenient store entrances.

After running a few hundred yards, Gilbert quit the street, leaped over the radiator of an automobile, loped across an open lot and crouched at the foot of a tree near the Hankins-Johann Sheet Metal Works.

C. O. Hankins and Edna Powell watched him from a window in the plant office. Police continued their revolver fire.

The lion moved off as hunters neared, leaping through a shop door, driving four workmen out. Here it was trapped, circus employes and the police closing and bracing all doors.

Once more the crowd forgot fear and approached the building, disregarding police warnings and making it virtually impossible for circus

Roosevelt Off to Hyde Park, Halting En Route for Fishing

By Leon Dure, Jr.
(Post Staff Writer).

Newport, R. I., Sept. 19.—President Roosevelt left Newport Harbor aboard Vincent Astor's yacht Nourmahal for an overnight trip to Hyde Park, N. Y., shortly after the third race between the Endeavour and the Rainbow was called off for want of wind early this afternoon.

En route back to the summer White House he confided to correspondents in an informal interview over the rails of the Astor yacht he planned to stop for two hours of fishing off Block Island. Then he was to continue to his Hudson Valley home, arriving tomorrow morning.

The Nourmahal waited for more than three hours, with others in the spectator fleet, for the rise of a breeze sufficient for the race committee to begin the match. When it was officially postponed, the Navy cutter Cuyahoga came alongside to give newspapermen a last word with the President.

Clad in a heavy gray-brown sweater, old trousers and a shirt opened at the collar, Mr. Roosevelt leaned over the starboard rail on the quarterdeck and announced he was going after "some porgies" in a launch off Block Island. When Assistant Secretary Marvin H. McIntyre, on the Cuyhoga, wanted to know whether he meant "old fogies" the President laughingly indicated the porgies are about a foot long and "good for breakfast."

The sea was calm as a mill pond as the Nourmahal headed about for Block Island. After the fishing expedition, the yacht proceeded down Block Island Sound to the Hudson River, reversing the voyage here which the President began last Friday at Hyde Park.

Although still technically on vacation, when Mr. Roosevelt returns to his summer home he again will take up a long appointment list which is expected to keep him busy until next week, at least. Most important of the questions before him is the settlement of the textile strike.

Mr. McIntyre meanwhile, broke up the temporary White House office here and with the rest of the President's entourage, began the trip by automobile back to Poughkeepsie, just below Hyde Park. There business will be resumed as usual tomorrow.

Lobbying Against Gas Restrictions Cited, 'Greasing' Told.

'The Public Be—' Says Astor, Deleting Vanderbilt 'Damned'

New York, Sept. 19 (U.P.).—The words of old Commodore Vanderbilt tonight came to the lips of young John Jacob Astor 3d, but he couldn't quite force himself to say "damned."

"The public be ——" said young John Jacob. He caught himself, started to say "nuts" again, and then said, "An ancestor of mine once said just what the public can do."

Young Mr. Astor was attending the wedding of Joan Blake and Henry H. Harjes at the Church of the Heavenly Rest. He and his bride, the former Ellen Tuck French, arrived at the church in separate automobiles. They insist that they have had no serious quarrel, as reported from Rhode Island.

Thousands of New Yorkers, anxious to catch a glimpse of the heir to the Astor millions and the girl who has been called "the substitute bride," jammed the street outside the church.

Astor arrived first. He wore a blue suit and a light hat, with the brim turned up. Reporters and photographers didn't recognize him at first. Ordinarily he doesn't wear such fine clothes.

The crowd surged forward, but the Nation's No. 1 bridegroom reached the church first.

A few minutes later another car came up with "Tucky." She leaped out, closed her eyes, and ignored the world.

When the wedding was all over, reporters and photographers flocked to the church entrance—and John Jacob came out.

"How about it, Mr. Astor?" they shrieked in tones never heard in Newport. "Were you quarreling with your wife? Did you have a battle. Did you say 'nuts' up there in Rhode Island?"

Mr. Astor was perspiring. His face was red.

"You can go along with me, a long way with me," he said, "but you won't get nowheres."

"Listen to that language," said a young lady who heard the remark.

"But," persisted the news gatherer, "the public wants to know."

"The public be ——" said Mr. Astor.

'How About Alcohol,' With Words, Pictures, Will Instruct Young.

"How About Alcohol?" a book on the effects of liquor and drinking illustrated with numerous cartoons will be used for the instruction of pupils in Washington's public junior and senior high schools this year.

At its meeting yesterday the Board of Education approved the volume which will serve as a text book upon the evils of drink. "How About Alcohol?" is the work of Dr. Emil Bogen, a California tuberculosis expert, and Lehman W. S. Hisey, a newspaperman.

On the title page the book is described as, "An illustrated outline of scientific facts about alcohol and about alcohol drinking." It has a preface by Dr. Haven Emerson and was published this year by the Angelus Press.

Many Cartoons.

With terse sentences and profuse cartoons the book vividly attacks the so-called fallacies about liquor—that alcohol is a food, that it is warming, that it is a stimulant, that it has a great medicinal value, that it is good for snake bite—and at the same time points out its harmful effects in all cases.

Typical among the cartoons is one illustrating the food value of alcohol. At one side is a market basket labeled "Foods that build tissue, muscle, bone, &c.," while at the other side is a little jug whose printed speech is "I don't belong to that class."

Then the text goes on to say:

Relief to Idle Called Racket In Budget Tiff

Commissioner Requests Facts From Citizen Who Objects.

Commissioner George E. Allen turned their own guns on critics of the District relief program at the District budget hearing yesterday.

The war over welfare broke out when Jesse C. Suter, formerly president of the Federation of Citizens' Associations and a member of the Takoma Park, D. C., association, denounced the large relief expenditures. His criticism came after he had demanded that the Commissioners approve larger appropriations for schools, recreational centers, libraries and improvements in his neighborhood.

"What about relief?" Commissioner Allen asked. The Commissioners' estimates called for an increase of $2,000,000 in relief funds. "Everybody comes down here asking for more money for schools and playgrounds and sewers and electric lights, but isn't there anybody to speak for the poor devils who have to ask for relief?"

"We are, I think, spending entirely too much for relief," the dignified, gray-haired Mr. Suter replied. "There is too much talk about relief. There is a lot of bunk in it. The more talk there is the more demand there will be for relief—the bigger the problem grows. It is becoming a racket."

"A racket? Yes?" Commissioner Allen resumed. "Now you have indicted a whole system. I want you to be specific. Let us have specific Plot for Wholesale Butchery, Terrorism Is Bared.

Several Arrested; Arms Confiscated

'Proletarian State,' After General Strike, Was Planned.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Madrid, Sept. 19.—The government was confident tonight it had disclosed a plot of enormous proportions to overthrow the Spanish republic and establish a "proletarian state" by means of a revolution more bloody than the recent abortive uprising in Austria.

Wholesale murder of public officials, terrorism throughout the country, capture of government arms manufacturing plants at Oviedo and Trubia and cooperation of Leftist elements of the air force and army had been planned, according to information the government claimed to have obtained from Asturias.

Premier Ricardo Samper conferred with President Alcala Zamora at his home and announced afterward he said he was sure the leading plotters, Socialists and extremists—would be apprehended promptly.

General Strike Planned.

Plans said to have been disclosed included a revolutionary general strike throughout Spain with a carefully schemed campaign of sabotage, bombings and other terrorism.

Squads of machine gunners were to have been designated for transporting in trucks to villages and towns, arousing the proletarian masses and massacring the opposition, cutting communications, taking over banks and assuming complete power.

Madrid was an armed capital tonight. With machine guns bristling from strategic points and several persons under arrest, a quantity of arms confiscated, and investigations continuing, Rafael Salazar Alonso, minister of the interior, felt justified in revealing to the Associated Press the details of the plot, according to information assembled by the government:

"The movement was planned for dawn Thursday, with a concerted nation-wide uprising of Socialists and Communists, based on Soviet strategic lines.

"Greatest in Modern Times."

"The revolt was scheduled to break simultaneously at Granada, Seville, Asturias and other points, but principally in Madrid. It was to have been the greatest revolutionary conflagration Spain has known in modern times.

"The rebels planned to take over the principal ministries in Madrid, from which they would direct their forces all over the country through the ministry of communications, following the strategy attempted in Vienna after the death of Chancellor Dollfuss."

According to information from radical sources, the Socialists had counted on the active cooperation of Communists and the indirect support of the Anarcho-Syndicalists, who so far have hesitated from actually joining hands with the Socialists.

Catalonian police were reported aroused by rumors of the presence in Spain of Baron Rolland, one of the chiefs of the German espionage service during the war.

According to police information, Rolland, whose real name is Isaac Ezrathy, was connected with Fascist propaganda and was seeking relations with Spanish Fascists on behalf of the Nazis, bearing letters of introduction from noted German diplomats in European countries.

Arms Are Captured.

While the civil guards tonight continued searching homes of known extremist leaders for weapons, the premier gave the president the details of the reported conspiracy to set up "a proletarian state," and assured Zamora the government was prepared for any emergency.

A truckload of arms captured at dawn today and documents found in the possession of Francisco Ordonez, athletic coach at Madrid University, who was arrested on the university athletic field, gave away the plot, the authorities said, and created widespread alarm in government circles.

In the truck seized were 54 cases of machine-gun bullets, 60 cases of rifle shells, 300 rifle clips, 34 machine-gun belts, 5 liquid flame machines, and three 14-millimeter guns capable of piercing armor plate.

Troops were ordered to barracks and heavy guards thrown around ministries, banks and other public buildings.

At San Esteben Special Judge Alarcon, investigating arms discoveries there and at Depravir, said evidence was almost conclusive that a Portuguese engineer named Castro, with two other Portuguese agents, had negotiated for the sale of huge quantities of arms manufactured in Spain.

instances where relief has been made a racket."

Mr. Suter said he voiced his general impression based on things which had been told him.

Asks for Facts.

"Well, it seems to me when you come in here with such grave charges you ought to have some facts to back them up," the Commissioner insisted. "Give us what facts you have."

Behind Mr. Suter sat Rufus Lusk, representative of the Washington Taxpayers' Protective Association and the Building Owners and Managers Association.

Although he has not been a witness at the hearings so far, Mr. Lusk has been a prominent figure at the hearings on the estimates. He has requested and been granted by the Commissioners the privilege of appearing last and summing up the argument against increasing the District budget. He has a book full of notes. He is to voice his views at the concluding session this morning.

As Mr. Suter stood preparing an answer Mr. Lusk gave him a nudge. Mr. Suter bent down.

"They fired 30,000 off the relief rolls today," Mr. Lusk whispered.

"The relief office," Mr. Suter said as he straightened up and turned back to the Commissioners, "dropped 30,000 cases today, I am informed."

"Is that so?" cried Commissioner Allen. "Well, all I've got to say is this: Whoever dropped 30,000 cases off the District relief rolls did a marvelous job. We only had 20,000 cases on the rolls."

"A morning newspaper published that statement today," interjected Mr. Lusk.

"You ought to be careful what papers you read," Commissioner Allen said sarcastically and Mr. Suter and Mr. Lusk left the hearing room together talking together in undertones.

The morning newspaper story referred to was not published in The Washington Post.

One "Chiseler" Discovered.

One relief "chiseler" has been found so far in the check-up of those receiving orders for surplus food products, Commissioner Allen announced after receiving a report from Miss Alice Hill, director of Emergency Relief Division. The Commissioner's announcement was made independent of the estimates hearings. He said a thorough check-up of those on relief is going on and will be pushed to completion.

"I have said that 5 per cent of those on relief are 'chiselers,'" Mr. Allen said. "That was a guess based on general observation. Our check so far hasn't disclosed anything like 5 per cent. There are a lot of people who are willing to criticize and talk. But when you pin them down they haven't much but talk.

"I want everybody in Washington to know we don't want 'chiselers' on our relief rolls. We can all make mistakes. Miss Hill is doing a wonderful job. Our work is going to improve as we go along. We welcome criticism from any one. Anybody is welcome to give us advice or tell us where we made a mistake in putting some one on relief. But we want facts. It just isn't fair to the whole relief program, nor to relief administration officials nor to those poor persons on relief to voice public criticism without having any facts to back them up. We want facts from anybody."

Commissioner Allen also made public a statement deprecating the National publicity given to his question at the hearings the day before about a municipal lottery to provide needed additional funds.

"I asked the question, but I am not going to seek enactment of a law authorizing a lottery here," he said. "The Commissioners can't set up a lottery. We are not going to base our estimates on any such plan. Congress would have to enact legislative authorization for a lottery. Can you see Congress passing such a law? I can't. There are too many who can't appreciate that a Commissioner might now and then want a little relief from the tedium of a public hearing."

Higher Taxes Opposed.

The question of taxes was again thrust to the fore by questioning of witnesses by the Commissioners. There was division of opinion. None urged an increase in taxes. Some said they did not want an increase in taxes. Some opposed an increased real estate tax. Some opposed this or that special tax proposed by others.

There was unanimity, however, on the question that the Congress has unfairly reduced the annual Federal appropriation toward the maintenance and development of the National Capital. The Federal appropriation should be brought back to the 60-40 basis provided for in law, W. C. Magathan, president of the Citizens Association of Takoma, D. C., said. Others agreed.

Among those who testified were H. C. Phillips, Citizens Forum; Ivery Brown, Hilldale Citizens Association; Mrs. Mary Proctor, Southwest Civic Association; Dr. Joseph M. Dodson, Rock Creek Citizens Association; W. A. Hamilton, Walker Post, American Legion; George E. Sullivan, Federation of Citizens Associations; R. B. English, Southeast Business Men's Association; Dr. George L. Johnson, Public Service Committee; Mrs. C. B. Wright, Forest Hills Citizens Association; Mrs. Elizabeth T. Sullivan, Federation of Citizens Associations; Mrs. Frank L. Scott, Burroughs Parent-Teacher Association; C. V. Diedel and Mrs. Belle Cutlet Parker, First Ward Citizens Association; Thomas J. Llewellyn, Federation of Citizens Association, and James O'Connor Roberts, American Legion.

The hearings will be resumed at 10 a. m. today. They are expected to be completed by noon.

Rampaging Circus Lion Killed by Guard

Gilbert, the Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus lion, who broke from his cage in a circus parade at Richmond and terrorized hundreds, was killed in a sheet metal shop. Five bullets were required to kill him. The guard who stopped the lion is pointing to the fatal wound.

Full U. S. Fleet Is Ordered Into Pacific Waters

Armada Will Stage Sham War in Summer Under Eyes of Japan.

Sound-Alaska-Hawaii triangle. This is in line with the Navy's policy of holding fleet problems and fleet concentrations in the various areas contiguous to American territorial waters."

He explained that the fleet exercises would imitate actual war conditions as far as possible.

The new interest which Army and Navy authorities have taken lately in the Puget Sound-Alaskan-Aleutian Island sectors has already aroused widespread uneasiness in Japan.

The Japanese have circulated reports that the United States contemplated establishing new submarine and air bases in Alaska. Secretary Swanson said yesterday that he had received no proposals of this sort from the naval authorities who have been studying the region during the summer.

Naval Survey Under Way.

A naval survey of the Aleutian Islands has been under way for some time, including the making of aerial maps. A submarine division, tow naval air squadrons and ten Army bombers visited Dutch Harbor, Alaska, recently. Swanson, at the time, described these activities as routine.

However, the effect upon Japan has been to intensify apprehension and bestir the admiralty to more "viewing with alarm." The newly announced plan for elaborate fleet maneuvers seems bound to add more fuel to these flames.

Meantime, the State Department faces a bleak outlook in returning to preliminary discussions in London next month on renewal of the London Naval Treaty. Japanese failure to attend the earlier discussions last June brought them to a quick and futile end. Norman H. Davis, American Ambassador at large, is due here soon for final conferences with President Roosevelt before returning to the resumed London sessions.

The State Department has yet to learn whether Japan means to go through with her threat to denounce the Washington treaty fixing the 5-5-3 ratio for battleships. If so, Japan's notification of that move must be made to the State Department by December 31.

In that event, the outlook for successful discussion of continuing naval agreements would be gloomier than ever. All signs would then point to a renewal of unrestricted competition. The London naval treaty, expiring next year, would collapse along with the Washington treaty.

Tokyo Envoy Coming to U. S.

Rear Admiral I. Yamamoto, Japan's representative to the preliminary discussions scheduled to be resumed in London next month—the exact date has not yet been fixed—is already on the way to London. He will cross the United States, but will not stop in Washington. Ambassador Davis, accompanied again by Admiral Richard H. Leigh and Commander Theodore Wilkinson, is due to sail immediately after conferring with Mr. Roosevelt.

Thus, as this meeting resumes in London, the Japanese will be confronted by the fact that the American fleet will be mobilized in a strategic position in the Pacific next year when and if the treaty breakdown comes. Whatever weight may be given to this "routine" matter in Japan, the Japanese decision on renouncing the naval treaties doubtless will be influenced by the possibility of closer Anglo-American naval collaboration.

So far as the State Department is concerned, this Government is maintaining a waiting and listening attitude. The next move is up to the Japanese in London on the question of renewal of the London treaty.

Meanwhile, the announcement of the naval demonstration in the Pacific next year is expected to produce another wave of heated discussion in Japan—regardless of the Navy's disclaimer of timing or staging the maneuvers in relation to the delicate questions of naval armament.

Crowd in Panic As Lion Escapes hands to form a runway with a strip of canvas into which they hoped to force the lion and eventually return it to a cage.

Gilbert was ordered shot when it became apparent that one or more of the crowd was in imminent danger of serious injury. With Paul's assistance a circus guard with a high-powered rifle determined the approximate location of the lion in the shop. The nearest door was flung open, and the guard opened fire.

Four shots were fired. At the first of them the lion roared in a frenzy of rage and fear. Three bullets took effect in the beast's neck, and it fell near death. One of the lion's keepers borrowed a policeman's revolver, entered the building, walked close and killed it with a shot through the brain.

During the hunt, one spectator, John Kelly, was slightly wounded in the forearm by a flying bullet. There were no other injuries to the hunters.

Meanwhile, the parade passed on, and thousands of persons stood along the line of march, totally unaware of the jungle drama.

Italy Protests Enmity Shown By Yugoslavs

Rome Government Sends Note Complaining of 'Virulent' Attacks.

Rome, Sept. 19 (AP).—A strong protest again the "virulent" anti-Italian campaign waged for the last two months by Yugoslav newspapers was made to the government at Belgrade today, the Italian foreign ministry announced tonight.

Italy's minister at Belgrade lodged the protest, which is the high point thus far developed in the friction between the two nations since Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, Austria was assassinated in July. The Yugoslav government immediately afterward received a communication from Rome.

Government circles here reiterated their belief the Yugoslav press attacks were ordered by the Yugoslav government in an effort to hinder the predicted rapprochement between France and Italy. This understanding, Italian officials hope, will be reached when France's foreign minister, Louis Barthou, comes to Rome late in October to confer with Premier Mussolini.

Feeling against Italy growing out of Mussolini's action in rushing 100,000 troops to the border during the Austrian Nazi revolt in July also prompted the attacks in the Yugoslav press, it was believed here.

A recent article in the semi-official Belgrade newspaper Vreme in effect accused the Italian army of cowardice. Information also was received in Rome that Yugoslav newspapers had printed wild reports of riots, strikes and conflicts with numbers of dead and injured at Milan, Turin and other Italian cities.

A small Italian newspaper, the San Marco, at Zara, was the only Italian newspaper to reply to the attacks, but Yugoslav newspapers seized the San Marco article as the basis for renewal of their campaign, in the course of which Italian soldiers were accused of cowardice and inefficiency during the World War.

France to Float 334 Million Loan

Sum Is Needed to Meet Maturing Obligations.

Paris, Sept. 19 (U.P.).—A conversion loan, estimated in financial circles tonight to be around 5,000,000,000 francs (about $334,000,000) will be placed on the market by the government tomorrow.

Finance Minister Louis Germain-Martin said it was to enable the treasury to meet maturing obligations. The loan matures in three, six and ten years.

"Coupled with balancing the budget," Germain-Martin said, "repayment of the Clementel bonds and other maturities will enable France to look to the financial future with confidence, and achieve the last phase of restoration of her national finances."

Move Up to Aid Durable Goods In Housing Plan

Business Advisory Body Will Discuss Program at Session Today.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Further steps to stimulate private construction in order to aid the durable goods industries will be the chief topic of discussion today when Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper's business advisory and planning council holds its sixth general meeting.

A committee headed by A. P. Greensfelder has prepared a report on the private construction problem with recommendations to spur the movement. This will be laid before the council for discussion and adoption of the recommendations. S. Clay Williams, vice president of the Reynolds Tobacco Co., is chairman of the council, formed a year ago to offer suggestions on recovery steps.

Despite the efforts made so far by the Government to increase construction, through public works programs and the housing scheme, the durable goods industries continue to lag. It is generally conceded that economic recovery will not be assured until these industries start on the upgrade and commence to absorb some of the unemployed.

Industries Still Lag.

Expectations that the work of the Federal Housing Administration would stimulate the capital goods industries so far have not been realized. But that agency is still in its infancy and has spent a good part of the ten weeks of its existence getting organized, as James A. Moffett, housing administrator, pointed out last night.

Mr. Moffett, in a Nation-wide broadcast, which opened the Electrical Show in New York, gave an accounting of the work of the agency to date. He said "From field reports we estimate that $1,000,000 a day of loans are being made under our plan."

"From experience in past community modernization campaigns we are sure that double that amount of cash business is being done," he continued. "That amounts to $3,000,000 a day, more than $1,000,000,000 a year, going into modernization and repairs throughout the United States."

Mr. Moffett said that the second part of the agency's program, which calls for releasing funds for the building of 1,000,000 or more homes needed by the Nation, would get under way by November 1.

Asks Help of Business.

In the meantime, he asserted, a program of modernization and repairs by the large corporations of the conutry "would hasten immeasurably the ultimate success of our plan as it relates to durable goods and unemployment."

"Many of the big corporations of the United States have done little or no modernizing, repairing or replacing of equipment since 1929," he explained. "They have been getting along with as little as possible of this sort of expenditure, the result being that their buildings and equipment have deteriorated and in certain instances have become obsolete, if measured by present-day standards."

He urged industry to follow the lead of the United States Steel Corporation, which recently appropriated $18,000,000 for plant modernization and improvement of equipment.

Mr. Moffett explained that much of the time of his agency has been spent so far in doing the necessary spadework to arouse enthusiasm among householders to borrow money from their banks to improve their homes.

"Economy Point" Stressed.

On this point, bankers contend that it is necessary to break down the fear which economic depressions create in persons of moderate means against going into debt. Part of the argument used, repeated by Mr. Moffett last night, is that price levels are bound to advance and that essential work can be done more cheaply now than in the next year or two.

In this regard, Mr. Moffett said his agency would be on the lookout to "expose any profiteering that may be attempted," but he added quickly that "on the other hand, we shall not countenance any effort to compel industries to chisel on their wages or go bankrupt."

"American business," he said, "must operate on a profit system, and, obviously, we shall have no recovery and prosperity in the country unless everybody who labors, or produces, or buys and sells, can make a fair profit."

Labor Insists Candidates Air Reform Views

30-Hour Week Support Is Required to Insure A. F. L. Backing.

(Associated Press.)

The American Federation of Labor strode into the fall political campaign yesterday, informing seekers after Senate and House seats that labor's support in November was contingent upon their advance indorsement of a legislative program including a 30-hour week.

Suddenly changing its policy, the federation sent its demands for a six-point social reform program to some 800 candidates for the 34 Senate and 432 House seats to be filled November 6.

Heretofore, the American Federation of Labor has supported or opposed candidates on their past records. Its demand for advance information was made without regard to party lines.

Some candidates yesterday manifested concern over the questionnaire sent out by William Green, president of the federation. It called for a simple "yes" or "no" on such things as the 30-hour week, 6-hour day, extension of the NRA, unemployment insurance, old-age pensions, a new Public Works program and labor dispute legislation.

Approved by Number.

On the other hand, a number expressed approval of the program, a part of which is closely in line with President Roosevelt's projected social reform plan outlined in a message to the last Congress.

In a letter accompanying the questionnaire, Green told the candidates that "if replies are not received within a reasonable time it will be considered that you are opposed to all the legislation urged by the American Federation of Labor, and our members will be so informed."

At the federation headquarters it was said the organization was determined to learn the position of the candidates, regardless of party affiliations, and that it intended to hold the candidates to their pledges.

It was indicated that the federation would continue to support the $10,000,000,000 public works program proposed at the last Congress by Senator Robert M. La Follette, Wisconsin Progressive Senatorial nominee.

Units to Be Informed.

Before the fall campaigning ends the replies, expected within the next two weeks, along with 50 already received but withheld, are to be made available to the 108 National and international unions, 48 State Federations of Labor, 900 city central bodies and 30,000 local unions.

"The unions and their members in the various Congressional districts and the States where Senators are to be elected," Green wrote, "will be informed of the answers and requested to vote accordingly."

The federation's questionnaire asks:

"Will you vote for the extension of the National recovery act and retain therein section 7(a), providing for the right to organize and bargain collectively; the prohibition of child labor and the elimination of unfair trade practices?

"Will you support social justice legislation providing for old-age pensions, unemployment insurance, work security and health protection?

"Will you vote for a measure providing that all codes under the National recovery act should contain a 30-hour week and a 6-hour day?

Jobless Insurance.

"Will you support legislation similar to the Wagner-Lewis bill introduced in the last session of Congress providing for unemployment insurance?

"Will you support legislation similar to the Wagner-Connery labor disputes bill with amendments drafted and supported by the American Federation of Labor?" (This bill, among other things, would outlaw company unions.)

"Will you support legislation providing adequate appropriations necessary for a public works program as a partial remedy for unemployment and for relief of dependent unemployed workers and their families?"

In his letter, Green explained the federation had received requests for the legislative records of the candidates for Congress from all districts, and added:

"The National recovery act has been of great benefit and its extension is necessary. It should retain, however, Section 7(a), providing for the right to organize and bargain collectively; the prohibition of child labor and the elimination of unfair trade practices."

Richberg Holds Business Made Complex Codes

Called Responsible, Rather Than Government; for Simplification.

Baltimore, Sept. 19 (AP).—Donald R. Richberg, general counsel of the NRA, today held business men, rather than the Government, responsible for the complicated nature of their codes.

Richberg suggested criticism of code administration as "being enmeshed in red tape and establishing bureaucracies" be directed at "the business men who wrote the codes and set up bureaucracies for their administration."

He addressed members of the advertising club and other Baltimore organizations.

Held Up to Business.

"The National Government offered to industry an opportunity for self-government, and if the experiment needs revision, the principal difficulty does not lie in persuading the Government to do the job, but in persuading the business men of the country to simplify those complicated mechanisms which they themselves have devised," Richberg said.

"For a year we have been watching the leaders of American trade and industry pour into Washington, accompanied by high-priced lawyers, economists and statisticians.

"We have seen them write their own codes of fair competition and set up enforcing authorities for self discipline, restrained all too little for their own good by Government supervision.

"And now we hear rising a strange discord of criticism—on the one hand, the cry that big business is controlling the codes, and on the other the cry that the Government is strangling business with red tape and bureaucratic regulations.

Declared Vicious.

"If this clamor were not so vicious it would be ridiculous."

He said the steel code, "probably the longest, most detailed regulatory code that has been written," required for its administration "the expenditure of $500,000 annually and a force of employes who, if established by the Government, would be called a bureaucracy."

"Personally," asserted Richberg, "I do not believe that a host of such codes and such bureaucracies should be made permanent. I believe profoundly in the wisdom of the process of codification, but I believe also that it must be simplified."

Own Law Stirs Bankhead to Cotton Revolt

Merriment Rife as All Await Parley Saturday With Wallace.

velvet gloves in inducing farmers to hold bountiful nature in restraint.

Every aid in AAA is hoping to crash into the Saturday conference between Wallace and Bankhead to see the fun when the Senator, who sees no humor in the situation, arrives to be saved from the effects of his own law.

Nature Took a Hand.

The trouble is simply this. The Bankhead law directs AAA to fix a limit on the cotton that can be marketed, putting a 50 per cent penalty tax on all in excess. AAA decided to permit 10,000,000 bales and each State was told what share of this it could send to market. Then nature took a hand. The drought slashed the heavy production of cotton in Texas and Oklahoma. So the total yield was only 9,000,000 bales—less than the Bankhead law allowed. But curiously and with Divine irony, the old cotton States of the Southeast, especially Senator Bankhead's own Alabama, had superb weather and raised more than the permitted allowance.

Now, with a short cotton crop in total, Senator Bankhead's constituents are lucky enough to have extra bales, but when they take them to market, they have to pay a confiscatory tax of about $30 a bale to the Federal Government. Senator Bankhead feels it is an outrage and he is hotfooting it to Washington to say so.

He says the purpose of the act was to hold to 10,000,000 bales the amount of cotton put on the market. That has been done and more than done with only 9,000,000 bales available. Therefore, says Senator Bankhead, the purpose of the act already has been achieved, so why not forget about the tax on those farmers who happen to have raised more than they were told they could?

Not Alone In His Fight.

Senator Bankhead is not alone in his fight. Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith, of South Carolina, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, who kept his fingers crossed when the Bankhead act was up in Congress last winter, already has put in his protest, quoting an ancient but disputed adage that when the necessity for a law ends the law dies.

Senator George, of Georgia, has wired President Roosevelt at Hyde Park, the Associated Press reports, calling on him to suspend the Bankhead law immediately, and his colleague, Senator Russell, made a similar appeal to Wallace. A resolution was introduced in the Legislature calling for revocation of the law.

President Roosevelt has power to nullify the act by declaring the emergency at an end. But AAA legal experts are wrestling now over the question of whether, if such an executive declaration were made, it also would automatically end the emergency for the whole AAA. They don't think it would, but they want to avoid any loophole whereby the constitutionality of AAA could be upset on the basis of such Presidential edict. Also Senator Bankhead would like to end the emergency for just this year and let the act stand next year against the chance that Southeastern cotton growers might have a short crop and would need protection against chiselers. This overlooks the human probability that if one section can have the law suspended for its benefit one year, another section might be able to do the same next year.

Small Farmers Hard Hit.

In addition to this basic complaint, there also is the complaint that small cotton farmers are hard hit by the act because in many cases they agreed to pay rent or bought supplies last winter before the Bankhead law was passed, and find themselves allowed to raise less cotton than they had counted upon. Complaint also is made that AAA has been slow—some say due partly to internal indifference or hostility to the law—in fixing the individual amounts each farmer would be allowed to raise.

Though the act was passed last April, AAA has not finished that job yet, though officials say they have worked as fast as they could. Caught midway in the crop season, it resorted to a makeshift of issuing interim certificates, which would permit each farmer to market half of his contracted cotton acreage, holding the remainder back until his final allotment was decided and certificates of exemption for it were supplied to him. Delay in completing this enormous amount of paper work, some of the new rebels say, has caused the early cotton farmers to lose money by being unable to get to market promptly with their full allotment.

Asked yesterday about the complaints of Senator Bankhead, Secretary Wallace smiled.

"I think one reason is that in the Eastern belt some farmers grew 100 bales, with an allotment of 36 bales," he said: "Of course we want to carry the act out as Congress intended and we want to be absolutely sure the South has changed its mind and now wants the law terminated before we do anything."

"Does this shake your confidence in agricultural democracy?" Wallace was asked in a reference to the fact that he polled the cotton belt before consenting to support the bill.

"Not at all," he replied. "Democracy was ever thus. Maybe if we hold democracy responsible for its decisions it may make them more carefully. One trouble has been that economic groups like agriculture and labor made their demands but the responsibility for them was taken by political groups."

Railroads Face Drastic Change, Wheeler Holds

Must Reorganize or Be Taken Over, Railway Executive Declares.

Chicago, Sept. 19 (AP).—Harry A. Wheeler, president of the Railway Business Association, asserted in a statement tonight that prompt reorganizations are vital if American railroads are to avert Government intervention "more drastic than is desirable." He asked a showing of the National Administration's plans to end uncertainty which, he said, is making capital shy of investment in the railroad industry.

"About one-sixth of the total operated rail mileage of the country is in receivership," said Wheeler, a former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce and former Chicago banker. "Some other roads also face financial difficulties. The Government lately has added new burdens in the shape of the railway pension act. This, with the restoration of the pre-depression wage scale, has created a condition which few roads can meet. ***

"That is not to say that the railroads can not become prosperous again under private ownership. To do this, however, they must have a square deal and they should not be subject to further oppressive legislation.

Reorganizations Vital.

"In the matter of receiverships, it is to be admitted frankly that reorganizations are vital. Further tardy action by the private owners in affecting necessary reorganizations may cause the Government to take more drastic action than is desirable, more drastic even than some of our theorists now plan. The President has manifested some impatience over the slow procedure in reorganization and he has disclosed his thoughts that other railroads not in receiverships must reorganize financially to place their existing capital structure in line to be supported by future earnings."

Wheeler said that investors would not put money into railroads without knowing the future plans of financing and regulation. "Either the Administration hopes to introduce a policy of Government ownership or it doesn't," he said. "Its declaration either way would simplify the whole situation. * * * Much harm can come from continued secrecy concerning the New Deal plans for the railroads." He also said that dispatches from Washington recently had indicated the amendments to the bankruptcy laws permitting voluntary reorganizations had patently failed, and that further contemplated amendments might include compulsion.

"It behooves the railroads, bondholders and shareholders, therefore, to do their part and act immediately," he concluded. "Otherwise, they must be prepared to receive drastic proposals from Washington, or even to face a situation where the Administration may find itself called upon to take over the properties, nothwithstanding the assumed preference of the President to leave the operations in private hands."

Hyde Park Gets Letter Mailed to Teddy Roosevelt

NRA yesterday was forwarded a letter from Hyde Park wheih was addressed to "the President of the United States, Honorable Theodore Roosevelt," the Associated Press reported.

The letter was written on stationery of the code authority of the Porcelain Enamel Manufacturing Industry and signed by an official of that authority.

NRA didn't know whether the letter actually reached President Franklin D. Roosevelt or was sent by one of his secretaries.

Five Packing Officials Indicted.

Los Angeles, Sept. 19 (AP).—Assistant United States District Attorney Fleet Palmer said today the Federal grand jury had indicted officials of five meat packing companies on charges of conspiring to defraud the Government in supplying turkeys, chickens and ducks for Navy use at San Pedro and San Diego.

Arms Rivalry for Market Uncovered Over Protest

a Brazilian revolutionary society, but advised a friend in Para he knew "a man here in New York that might be able to handle this business, but not with the Thompson gun."

Statement by Jonas, associate of Young, that he is informed the French government makes direct sales of all types of armament in South American markets.

Excepting only Argentina, Jonas said payment of "commissions" and use of "grease" to pave the way to armament orders is general in South America, and American firms were driven to the practice by keen foreign competition.

It was when sharply-worded comments by competitors on Federal laboratories' products were disclosed in a letter from Raoul Leon, Buenos Aires agent, that Young vigorously appealed for exclusion from the record "of these private matters."

"I am 100 per cent behind your investigation and so are the directors of my company," said Young with some heat. "But you can get just as good results without washing all this dirty linen."

Rivals' Attack Read.

"Do you think we should put it away unwashed?" replied Senator Homer Bone, of Washington, as he proceeded to read a letter from Leon making personal allusions to Young and things said about his company by rival agents.

"We just want to find out," Senator Bone said, "what munitions salesmen think of each other."

"Generally, they have little regard for each other," Young replied. "It is that way in the export business. We find a vicious sentiment toward one another."

Bone read comments attributed by one of Young's agents to Francis Love, of the United Aircraft & Transport Co., charging Federal Laboratories with "high profits."

"All I can say is," put in Young angrily, "in view of the small profits we made compared to United Aircraft, we certainly must be pikers."

Jonas Is Quoted.

Other letters read by Bone quoted Young's associate, Jonas, as finding fault in strong language with a letter Young wrote to Leon. Jonas wrote Leon that Young's success had "gone to his head." The Buenos Aires agent was advised to inform Young that Leon knew how to look after his end of the business.

Earlier, Young told the committee:

"All my life, until the last few years, I had been in commercial business, and I don't like this arms business."

"Then, why do you stay in it?" asked Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, chairman of the committee.

"We got into it during the depression," Young said. "Our business of supplying banks and police departments with tear gas and similar equipment fell off. The banks began to be more afraid of their depositors than of bandits. It was then that we had to look to military business."

Driven by Banks.

"Do you mean that the banks drove you into the military business?" asked Nye.

"Oh, no," replied Young.

Jonas told the committee its exposures might be expected to have a harmful effect on other American exports.

"Foreign governments buy a great many things besides ammunition and arms," he siad.

Chief Investigator Stephen Raushenbush asked if he meant the munitions disclosures might "ruin" the rest of the American export trade.

"I do," said Jonas.

Both Young and Jonas insisted most references to "commissions" and "greasing" related to orders they never got, and frequently were cited by agents interested in raising their own commissions by telling how much they had to "pay out." Young said he frequently admonished salesmen against the practice.

Many Payments.

Correspondence read into the record made many references to such payments. A Venezuelan salesman wrote he had to give away 50 per cent of his commission "officially" and make unofficial disposition of the rest. A Brazilian agent said he spent $1,200 in "a greasing operation" in which the son of a local official was concerned. Letters from Argentine and Costa Rican representatives spoke of many persons "taken care of."

Names of officials to whom Federal Laboratories claimed to make payments in Honduras were withheld from the record on request of witnesses.

"It is customary for these agents to make all sorts of claims," commented Jonas, when other "commission" payments were cited. "As a rule we make no change whatsoever in their commissions on account of this talk."

He said they had not "fired" salesmen, because other agents "probably would try the same thing."

Witnesses told the committee that not only would France, but England and other foreign countries support their munitions makers in making South American sales.

"In Montevideo, I am told, the British Ambassador was interested in a sale to the police department," put in C. W. Rich, associated with Young and Jonas. "He even arranged for Montevideo police to be sent to England for training."

Police Story Discounted.

Young discounted as "sales talk" a letter quoting an official of the United States Ordnance Engineers Co., rivals in the manufacture of tear gas. The letter declared the rival concern held the New York police department "in the palm of its hand."

The head of Federal Laboratories, Inc., told the committee more than 100 foreign machine guns have been brought into New York this year by an importer who sold the guns without restriction.

In the face of a letter Young wrote Leon referring to "lobbying" activities in the interest of tear gas in the National and State capitals, the official insisted his interest was principally in tightening the Nation's crime laws.

"I think Joseph Keenan, the Assistant Attorney General, will bear me out," he said.

Guards Stoned, 1 Hurt in Clash At Maine Plant

Two Arrested in Outbreak; Strikers and Police Battle First.

Waterville, Me., Sept. 19 (AP).—A National Guardsman was injured tonight as troop patrols at the Lockwood Cotton Mill, scene of a hand-to-hand melee between police and strikers earlier today, were stoned by men who, authorities said, were strike sympathizers.

Private Wilbur Hayford, of Company A, 103d Infantry, Biddeford, was struck on the leg by a flying missile. Local police and militiamen arrested John Gadbout and Charles Vigure, both of this city. They were charged with assault and booked for arraignment tomorrow in municipal court.

Hayford returned to duty after receiving treatment. Six members of the hospital corps were on duty.

National Guard headquarters mobilized another unit for movement into the Waterville area. The howitzer company of the 103d Infantry, of Portland, was ordered out.

"We need more man-power in Waterville," said Adjt. Gen. James W. Hanson at Augusta.

The arrest of Gadbout and Vigure brought to eight the number of men taken in custody in disturbances in the area today.

Return of some strikers to their posts in Rhode Island and Connecticut mills was offset by the enforced idleness of 400 employes of the Wyandotte Worsted Co. at Pittsfield, Mass., because of a strike of pickers. The strikers closed the Abbot Worsted Co. plants employing 800 at Forge Valley and Graniteville, near Lowell, Mass.

Two hundred pickets, rallying to the cry of "Let's go," stormed the Lockwood Mill in the earlier clash. A cordon of local and State highway police fought them furiously for nearly an hour. Only the arrival of George Jarbar, head of the Maine Textile Council, who led the strikers from the mill, ended the hostilities.

vigilante committees to oppose any attempts of Communists to participate in the walkout. A similar group was organized in Belmont, N. C.

In a reply to a radio speech by Henry I. Harriman, United States Chamber of Commerce president, Gorman charged the union was misrepresented.

Reports Still Missing.

"Mr. Harriman," he said, "speaks of the competent division of research and planning of the NRA which was to have made reports under the so-called Johnson agreement of June 2. He did not say that the most important of the reports which were to have been made by research and planning has not yet been made. I don't think it ever will be made.

"Mr. Harriman says we assured Gen. Johnson we would not strike. That is not true. Gen. Johnson agreed to do certain things, one of which was to procure from research and planning this series of reports. But in addition to that, the agreement with Gen. Johnson specifically said that the right to strike was reserved. We did not break any agreement with Gen. Johnson."

Gorman dismissed as a "red herring" a statement by Harriman that the chief purpose of the strike was to perfect the union organization.

"He says," Gorman added, "that there has been reemployment for nearly 200,000 workers under the code. He seems to think a lot of that code. He ought to. It has been a real help to management.

"Management was in the red. This year it has made profits and in many cases these profits have been tremendous. The story about reemployment for 200,000 is a nice fiction. I wish it were true.

"The fact is that when the strike was called employment was at the lowest point since the code took effect. For every man or woman at work another stood idle, unemployed, hungry, many of them actually destitute."

Refusal Defended.

Gorman defended his refusal to treat with the NRA Cotton Textile Industrial Relations Board.

"Mr. Harriman has the incomparable effrontery to say we wanted war and not peace because we refused to place our fate in the hands of that board, which has sold us into bondage deeper and deeper for a whole year.

"We did want peace and I challenge Mr. Harriman to face the facts fairly and state them accurately. * * *

"He said a lot of things that were wrong, biased, unfair and untrue. But let him go and have a good time with his chamber of commerce companions. We have our work to do in behalf of 500,000 workers who have been bled white by the men for whom Mr. Harriman so poorly speaks."

Gorman telegraphed Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia to complain about use of troops.

Called Arch Enemy.

"You have proven yourself an arch enemy of labor by using the armed forces of your State to drive men back into starvation conditions and absolute subservience to mill owners," he wired.

"Your troops have destroyed civil rights and made a mockery of your State laws. You do not seem even to be aware that the United States Constitution exists or that there are Federal laws which guarantee to workers of your State and all States the right to organize into unions and to bargain collectively through those unions with mill management."

Meanwhile, the Presidential mediation board prepared to submit a report to Secretary Perkins.

Manila to Renew Claim To 9 China Sea Islets

Manila, Sept. 19 (AP).—Secretary of Finance Elpido Quirno announced tonight he planned to renew the Philippines' claim to nine coral islets in the China Sea, combatting claims of France, Japan and China.

Quirno said new evidence of Philippine ownership had been uncovered by a Jesuit priest. Years ago Quirino asked the Legislature to press the Philippine claim when France raised its tricolor over the islets, but no action was taken at that time.

Evening School Registrations Start Monday

'Opportunity' Classes in Alexandria Open to Persons Over 16.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The superintendent of the Alexandria public schools has announced that registration for the two "opportunity" night schools for adults will be held in the Alexandria High School and the Parker-Gray School, from 7:30 p. m. to 9:30 p. m., on Monday to Saturday. Any person over 16 years of age, wishing to attend these schools, will be registered at that time.

Supt. Williams expressed the hope those interested will present themselves promptly for registration, indicating the classes they desire to attend. The classes offered will depend to some extent upon the number registering for a particular class. The government regulations require an average daily attendance of ten, which means an enrollment of at least 15, unless the attendance percentage is unusually high.

The superintendent stated it may be taken for granted that courses in shorthand, typing and possibly business English and mathematics will be offered, and the school authorities hope a class may also be offered in art, embracing both commercial and classical fields, as it is believed an instructor can be secured for this work if there are enough registrations to justify.

It is the intention of the school authorities to begin the regular work of the night schools on October 1, the school being open five nights a week, and following very much the same program as the day school so far as holidays are concerned. The teachers will be paid by the Federal Educational Relief Agency, and the only expense to the city will be for water, light, coal and possibly janitor service. It is expected the classes will be continued through the winter, and probably until June 1, if the attendance is satisfactory.

Grand Matron Visits Chapter.

Mrs. Emily B. Chinn, worthy grand matron of the grand chapter in Virginia, Order of the Eastern Star, paid an official visit to Martha Washington Chapter, No. 42, in Alexandria Tuesday night. Mrs. Helen Nalls, worthy matron, presided.

Short addresses were delivered by these past grand officers: Miss Louise Beale, Richmond, past grand matron and grand secretary; Mrs. Nellie Cosden, Clarendon; Mrs. Emma Huddleston, Roanoke; Alfred C. Cosden, Clarendon; Virgil C. Davis and Harry F. Kennedy, Alexandria.

"The United States Government is spending more money today to protect the legalized liquor business from bootleggers and rumrunners than it formerly spent in trying to enforce prohibition to protect our homes," declared Edward B. Dunford, at the evening session of the Alexandria City-Arlington County W. C. T. U. convention in Alexandria Tuesday. Mr. Dunford is legal counsel for the Antisaloon League of America. He also explained the purpose of the new constitutional amendment proposed by Senator Sheppard, of Texas, at the last session of Congress.

The convention elected these officers for the coming year: Mrs. Martha N. Brookings, president; Mrs. G. A. Hamilton, vice president at large; Mrs. A. H. Davidson, recording secretary; Miss Marian Merrill, corresponding secretary; Mrs. C. A. Strauss, treasurer; Mrs. J. A. Hulfish and Mrs. A. H. Davidson, pianists; Mrs. Charles Linger, song leader.

A large delegation from the St. Mary's Church branch of the Holy Name Society will go to Richmond September 30 to attend the convention of the society in St. Peter's Church. The committee in charge of arrangements for the trip is composed of Robert Cary, Herbert Cady and Francis H. Fannon. A special meeting of the society will be held Sunday night in the Knights of Columbus Home to arrange details.

Picked drill teams under the direction of Mrs. Viola Hudson will give floor drills. Several State and National officers are expected to attend, as well as delegations from Norfolk and Richmond.

Four Fined $1,200 For Possession of Moonshine Liquor

Chambersburg, Pa., Sept. 19 (Spl.). Fines aggregating $1,200 were imposed by Judge Watson R. Davison in Franklin County Court here upon Mrs. Amy C. McIntyre, of Gettysburg; her husband, P. H. McIntyre; H. T. Cunningham, of Gettysburg, and Miss Mary Marshall, of Brookside, N. Y., who pleaded guilty to possession of moonshine liquor. They were arrested at Waynesboro, August 21. Each was fined $300.

Two Reporters Ejected From Fusion Session

Montgomery County Group Raps High Overhead of Rum Stores.

Excessive costs of administering the Montgomery County liquor dispensaries were criticized last night at a meeting of the Fusion party in the home of Walter Bachrach in Edgemoor, Md.

During the meeting two reporters from the Maryland News, organ of the Montgomery County Democratic party, were ejected.

Joseph A. Cantrell, a candidate for the House of Delegates, charged that the per capita cost of administering the county dispensaries is $4.50, while Wicomico and Worcester Counties' per capita costs are 47 cents and 26 cents, respectively.

The reason for these excessive costs, he said, is that the county has purchased from one of the affiliates of the "Kingfish" a plot of land at a cost of $1.75 a square foot, while the land is assessed at only 8 cents a square foot.

The $600 raise given the county commissioners at the last session of the Legislature was illegal, Walter H. Dawson charged. The constitution, he said, prevents any salary raises to officials while they are in office.

Other speakers were Millward C. Taft, a candidate for the House of Delegates, and S. E. Stonebreaker, candidate for county commissioner. William Tyler Page, former clerk of the House, presided.

3 Ill Children Rescued From Burning Home

Damage to Residence in Arlington County Is Placed at $3,500.

ARLINGTON COUNTY
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Three ill children were rescued when the home of their parents caught fire yesterday.

The fire, of unknown origin, caused damage to the home of Capt. Eugene M. Caffey, U. S. A., on Glebe road, to the extent of $3,500, according to firemen.

Mincho Caffey, 7 yeras old, who was in bed on the third floor, was the first to discover the fire. Calling to his mother, who was on the second floor, he was quickly rescued by her. Arthur Shreve and Donival Pumphrey, who happened along as the fire was discovered, aided in rescuing Helen, 3, and Thurlow, 1 year old. Pumphrey was badly burned about the face and right hand.

With the aid of neighbors, Mrs. Caffey saved most of the furniture.

Firemen from Cherrydale, Ballston, Clarendon and Halls Mill found the roof in flames. Firemen were able to hold the fire to the second floor.

Power Rate Cut Assured.

The Arlington County Public Utilities Commission announces it has received assurance from the Virginia Public Service Co. that they plan a reduction for domestic electric current throughout its system.

While it refuses to make public definite figures regarding the contemplated reduction, C. I. Kephart, chairman of the commission, said the company has submitted a tentative schedule to the Virginia State Corporation Commission proposing reductions in four phases of consumption.

The new rate would be based upon consumption alone, the larger the amount of current used the lower the rate. It is designed to bring relief to the electric users who have neither refrigerators nor ranges.

Although the proposed new rates will be of the greatest benefit to consumers of large quantities, it will bring some relief to the smaller users, it was announced. It is estimated that a consumer who is now paying about $6 a month for current will have his bill reduced approximately 25 per cent when the full schedule becomes effective.

Fellowship Dinner Held.

More than 125 persons gathered at the Community Methodist Church in Aurora Heights last night to attend the fellowship dinner.

The exercises opened with invocation by the Rev. John H. Pearson, pastor of the Clarendon Methodist Church. The guest speaker, introduced by the pastor, the Rev. Walter Lockett, was the Rev. J. J. Rives, pastor of the Emory Methodist Church of Washington. Solos were sung by Mrs. Edna Woodyard, accompanied by Miss Shirley Page Shepherd, and J. Nelson Anderson, accompanied by Mrs. Anderson.

The proposal to change the name of the Arlington-Fairfax Counties Firemen's Association to either the Arlington County Firemen's Association or the Arlington County Fire Department has been referred to the several companies.

It is pointed out that the only reason Fairfax has been kept in the name is because Falls Church is a member and is located in the Fairfax section.

Tentative plans are being made to open the firemen's schools. Included in the course will be a study of first aid.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Washington Lee High School will hold its first meeting of the school year tonight at 8 o'clock in the auditorium. Following a short business session a reception to the teachers will be held. Monroe H. Stockett, vice president, will greet the assembly.

The Arlington County Monarch Club will hold its weekly luncheon meeting today at 12:30 o'clock at Windsor Tavern.

Gasoline Pact Extends Limit Of D. C. Prices

More Than 200 Dealers in Maryland, Virginia Counties Affected.

In four Maryland and Virginia Counties adjacent to Washington gasoline was selling at District prices yesterday by virtue of an understanding between independent dealers and distributors which ended a long-standing controversy.

More than 200 dealers in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties in Maryland and Arlington and Fairfax in Virginia were affected by the price changes, according to Fred Heine, president of the Independent Gasoline Dealers of Montgomery County, the organization which negotiated the agreement.

The agreement extends to county lines the so-called District price zone which embraced, for the most part, only stations close to the Capital.

Under its terms, most of the independent dealers in the four counties are guaranteed a margin of profit, the dealers themselves and the distributors paying the differences in the District and Mafyland and Virginia tax rates.

The recent controversy saw dealers selling at a variety of profit margins, with some facing bankruptcy.

According to Mr. Heine, the agreement will be in effect for at least a year, at which time his organization and others are to begin a campaign in the Virginia and Maryland State legislatures for a lowering or equalization of taxes.

Blair Club Holds First Flower Show

Ballard was the judge and gave an illustrated talk on flowers with special regard to the care of potted plants. The show was limited to residents of Blair.

An amendment to the constitution was approved stating that three delegates and alternates to the Montgomery County Civic Federation shall be elected annually at the May meeting. The amendment will be voted upon at the next meeting.

Reckless driving of high school students on Chicago avenue is said to be endangering the lives of elementary school children going to and from their school. The association will endeavor to remedy this by appealing to local authorities.

Officials Ponder Town Federation

Montgomery Proposal Must Be Approved by Voters.

The formation of a federation of ten incorporated towns of Montgomery County was proposed last night at a meeting of town representatives in the Rockville Firehouse.

The plan for the federation to discuss mutual problems was proposed by Edgar Reed, a Rockville councilman. Mayors and other representatives of the municipalities attended the meeting. No definite action was taken.

Before they could sanction such a federation, the mayors explained, they would have to have the approval of their constitutients. Plans were laid for a more equitable distributon of the State gasoline tax.

G. O. P. Will Elect In Prince Georges

Republicans to Hold First Committee Meeting.

The Republican State central committee of Prince Georges County, as a newly elected body, will hold its first committee meeting in Baltimore next Thursday. A chairman will be elected.

The State-wide committee also will meet on this day, shortly after the various county meetings, to elect its chairman. William P. Lawson has been mentioned as a rival for Galen L. Tait, veteran chairman.

Although no one has been prominently mentioned to head the Prince Georges County committee, it is expected that Dr. Thomas E. Latimer, of Hyattsville, former chairman, will be actively in the run for reelection.

Virginians Shy On Speakership

House Members Plan Delay in Commitment Until Group Meets.

A movement is on foot in Virginia's House delegation to hold off commitment of its members to any of the Speaker candidates until the group can meet to determine the choice of the majority.

One of the delegation's members wrote the others urging them not to express a choice now. The letter was well-received. As a result, the Virginians are sending polite replies to the candidates' requests for support, in which they say they have not made up their minds.

The movement does not mean the group will vote solidly for any one of those seeking the highest House office, but it does indicate that a majority will go in one direction in the hope of gaining advantage for the group as a whole.

The announced candidates so far are Majority Leader Byrns, Tennessee; Chairman Bankhead of the Rules Committee, of Alabama; Chairman Rayburn of the Interstate Commerce Committee, of Texas; Chairman Green of the Territories Committee, of Florida, and Sabath, of Illinois.

Last session a majority of the Virginians supported McDuffie, of Alabama, against the late Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, for Speaker, and also gave their votes to Bankhead for majority leader against Byrns. A few supported the successful Rainey-Byrns group.

It is the hope of certain members of the delegation that a solid front can be presented in the Speakership election next January. The delegation will meet before the general party caucus next January with that end in view. In the meantime members of the delegation are listening to the gossip and studying the situation.

Bidder Offers To Deliver Milk At 3c a Quart

Total Cost to District Needy Would Not Exceed 8 Cents.

Confronted with the determination of District relief officials to buy, process and deliver so-called surplus milk to the District needy, local distributors have begun to bid for the profitable processing and distributing job.

An offer to process, bottle and deliver the relief milk for 3 cents a quart bottle was made yesterday through an agent to Elwood Seal, assistant corporation counsel, in charge of preparing plans for the milk distribution.

Mr. Seal refused to reveal the identity of the person who made the offer. He said he believed the offer to be a responsible one, but that the agent who made the proffer did not disclose the name of his principal.

"Such an offer is most interesting because it would mean the District relief agencies could get and distribute milk to the needy at a cost of not more than 8 cents a quart at the outside," Mr. Seal said.

Indicative of the desire of the distributors to handle the relief milk was a statement made by Henry N. Brawner, jr., head of the Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairies, in his letter to Mr. Seal offering the cooperation of that concern in the plan.

Mr. Brawner said his plant was equipped to process and bottle all the surplus milk. He said he presumed the matter would be handled by the usual Government contract and that the contract would be let to the lowest bidder.

One or two of the largest of the independent dairies in the District have not yet indicated their willingness to cooperate in the plan. Unless they do so soon, Mr. Seal said, he will recommend to Commissioner Allen to push the plan without giving them consideration.

Absolute Rule Over Churches By Reich Seen

Government to Fight Effort to Establish Independent Unit.

Berlin, Sept. 19 (AP).—The German government has decided to fight relentlessly any effort to establish churches independent of the state.

Simultaneously, Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller, head of the official German Protestant Church, demanded at Hanover that opposition pastors become Nazis or get out.

"Everyone should be forced into Nazi ranks even though he does not quite understand National Socialism," the Reichsbishop, speaking in the Hanover City Hall, said, "and the same should be demanded of pastors.

Absolute Domination Seen.

"If they are not able to live up to this, then they should go."

The two new and startling developments in this nation's tense church situation combined to strengthen the belief of oppositionists that the Nazis intend to dominate absolutely all of Germany's churches.

The National Socialists' decision to resist any effort to form an independent church along the lines of those in the United States was taken at the party's recent congress in Nurnberg, the Bavarian minister of interior disclosed.

Will Ban Resignations.

It was learned, also, that the Reich ministry of the interior is preparing legislation under which resignations from church memberships during the next three years will be prohibited.

This would mean that opponents of Mueller and his official church would have to stay within the Nazi church ranks.

From Wuerttemberg came the news that 90 per cent of the clergy in that district had informed Dr. August Jaeger, Nazi commissioner for Protestant churches in Prussia, they declined to accept his instructions not to recognize Teophil Wurm as their bishop.

Bishop Wurm was suspended last week for his opposition to Mueller.

Philippine Action To Aid Fishermen

Cabinet Plans Prosecution of Nippon Poachers.

Manila, Sept. 19 (AP).—The Philippine cabinet took action tonight to discourage illegal incursions of Japanese fishermen into Philippine waters.

It directed that criminal action be instituted against the members of the crew of the fleeing Hayun Maru—if they can be caught—to punish them for attacking and throwing overboard three insular government officers who intercepted the poaching boat off Palawan Island September 11.

Secretary of Justice Jose Yulo is instructed to prepare charges which will be necessary if extradition is undertaken in the event the Hayun Maru escapes three searching United States revenue cutters and returns to Formosa, a Japanese possession.

The cabinet, however, is not sure that the United States and Japan have an extradition treaty, and may not be able to get possession of the runaways if they reach Japanese territory.

Movie Extras to Learn Status Under NRA Rule

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 19 (AP).—Motion picture extras—approximately 10,000 of them—were wondering today whether they will be called sheep or goats.

The business of eliminating from official lists all the part-time extras so that a few of them may work steadily, as provided by the NRA code, has begun. The NRA extras' code reregistration subcommittee has sent questionnaires to the 10,000 and will pass on the eligibility of those to be retained.

Profit at Fair Depends On 4,900,000 Visitors

Chicago, Sept. 19 (AP).—Paid admissions to the World's Fair, Comptroller Martin M. Tveter said today, must total 16,500,000 this year in order to fully liquidate all indebtedness and to provide a sum sufficient for closing and demolition of the exposition.

The total attendance to date is approximately 11,600,000, leaving 4,900,000 admissions necessary to reach the total set by Tveter. The average daily paid attendance from May 26 to September 10 was 98,500.

Slain Boy's Playmate Safe in California

San Diego, Calif., Sept. 19 (AP).—Jackie Confar, 10-year-old playmate of little Dalbert Aposhian, whose mutilated body was taken from San Diego Bay last summer, was declared safe by police late today after a prevoius statement by authorities that he had been kidnaped.

The district attorney's office also said the boy's whereabouts was known and intimated he was being questioned again regarding the Aposhian case. The county grand jury, was in session today.

Brochure on Alcohol Tells Its Horrors to City Pupils

"No matter how much alcohol is taken into the system, its maximum food value does not exceed the value of eating two lumps of sugar per hour." Along another line, the authors say that the heavy drinker may suffer from pellegra due to the fact that alcohol may cause him to lose appetite for necessary types of foods.

Alcohol Baths Approved.

The authors declared that alcohol baths were all right and that alcohol had a limited legitimate use in medicine as a sedative.

The idea that liquor makes one warmer was ridiculed in the textbook with the statement that it only made one think he was warmer. It went on to say that this in itself was dangerous because under the influence of alcohol many persons became seriously chilled without knowing it.

Typical of the book was the statement: "In every form of sport alcohol weakens endurance." Going into scientific details, the authors said that this was because the lactic acid produced by activity was removed from muscles more slowly when there was alcohol in the blood.

To describe the effect of alcohol upon the nervous system the book uses a cartoon picturing two 20-mule teams—one with reins intact and the other with reins broken. The legend was, "Alcohol affects the nervous system as broken reins affect a 20-mule team."

In another illustration the "five stages of drunkenness" as described. This pictured five human figures, the first three erect and "careless, boisterous and staggering," respectively. The fourth and fifth figures are prone and labeled "helpless" and "unconscious," respectively.

Instruction Authorized.

The Board of Education in the District is authorized by law to teach the effects of alcohol and narcotics. The new book will not be used with a special new course, but will be presented more or less incidentally in the junior and senior high schools in the program which has been worked out by the superintendent of schools.

"How About Alcohol?" also scores moderate drinking with such words as "the smallest amounts are harmful to the motor driver." The book goes on to say that "moderate drinking many times leads to immoderate drinking."

The occasional reports of aged persons who attribute their longevity to alcohol are described as having the same status as the "man bites dog" story—that is, it is an exception for a heavy drinker to live to an old age.

Another cartoon pictures an animated bottle armed with a paint brush putting a black mark on the end of four lines which illustrate the causes of disease, accident, violence and suicide.

The old story about whisky for snake bite is dismissed with this sentence, "People bitten by harmless snakes have been killed by the alcohol treatment that was given them."

Carolina Vote Blocked On New Constitution

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 19 (U.P.).—North Carolina will not vote on the adoption of the proposed new State constitution at a general November election, as a result of the Supreme Court's decision late today, declaring last November's repeal referendum a "general election."

Under the existing State law constitutional amendments must be voted upon at the first general election following the general assembly which passed upon the amendment. Since the repeal vote was ruled a "general election," the coming November balloting would constitute the second general election since the last Assembly.

New Orleans Thugs Flee Vice Squads

'For Rent' Signs Dot Doors of Underworld Haunts.

New Orleans, Sept. 19 (AP).—"For Rent" signs were tacked up today in New Orleans' underworld.

Like Arabs stealing away in the night, occupants knocked down their "tents" and disappeared as police vice squads cruised around lower sections of the city in what they said was the most drastic clean-up of moral conditions in New Orleans history.

Armed with vacating notices authorized by Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley in his announced plan to stamp out vice and gambling, police said they found most of the spots already deserted and "For Rent" signs on the doors.

cultivating farm lands in violation of the Arizona land law leave the valley.

The matter quickly brought diplomatic representations from Tokyo and the State Department in Washington communicated with Gov. B. B. Moeur urging that all possible precautions be taken against violence.

The county attorney's office immediately began an investigation of alleged violations of the alien land law. Several complaints were filed against both Japanese and Hindu farmers and white land owners. In some cases charges have been dismissed and others are awaiting trial.

Consul Sends Report Of Bombing to Tokyo

Los Angeles, Sept. 19 (U.P.).—The bombing of Japanese-operated farms in the Salt River Valley of Arizona today was reported to Tokyo and the Japanese Embassy at Washington, T. Hori, consul in Los Angeles, told the United Press tonight.

"The Governor of Arizona has assured us he will take all steps to protect our countrymen," Hori said, "and I am relying upon him to see that there are precautions against further outrages. We have no means to compel protection for the Japanese other than to appeal to authorities to do their duty. I believe and hope they will."

The British consul, Wentworth Gurney, was out of the city, but aids said the situation was being watched closely.

Embassy May Ask Aid Of State Department

The Japanese Embassy last night had not yet been informed of acts of terrorism against citizens of the Asiatic Nation in Arizona, but attaches said if such reports were true an appeal probably would be made to the State Department for protection.

Vatican City, Sept. 19 (AP).—George Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago had a conference at the Vatican today with Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state. The American prelate then met Mgr. Carlo Respighi, prefect of apostolic ceremonies, and the ceremonial for Cardinal Mundelein's episcopal jubilee Friday, St. Matthew's Day, was arranged.

When Cardinal Mundelein returned to his hotel he was visited by Pietro Cardinal Fumasoni-Biondi, formerly apostolic delegate to Washington and now prefect of the Congregation for the Propagation of the Faith.

Mortgage Law Aiding Farmers Is Held Illegal

Baltimore Federal Judge Views Debt Measure as Confiscatory.

courts and to abrogate contracts legally entered into and, in the case at hand, consummated.

Judge Chesnut made his declaration in dismissing petitions filed by William W. Bradford, Belair, Md., farmer, and Charles A. Compton, Carroll County farmer, who sought stays to prevent mortgage foreclosure proceedings under the moratorium amendment.

Similar Case in Kentucky.

The Bradford case was the first to have been brought to court in this section under the Frazier-Lemke act, passed by Congress last June. A similar case is pending in Federal Court in Louisville, Ky.

The avowed purpose of the act was to allow debt-pressed farmers to keep and operate farms. According to its provision a farmer who is in arrears in mortgage interest and principal payments, and who is about to be foreclosed, may first get an extension of six months from Federal Court in order that he may make a proposition to his creditors. During that period no interest on the debt is charged. If the moregage holder and other creditors do not agree to the proposition, the farmer may then petition the court for a five-year stay of foreclosure. During that time he stays on the farm, which, under the terms of the mortgage contract, would have gone to the high bidder at the foreclosure sale in order to satisfy the overdue debt—and pays the mortgage holder a rental which the court sets.

Farm Had Been Foreclosed.

In the Brandon case the farm already had been sold by the mortgage holder and the purchaser desired possession of the property.

"I am compelled to reach the conclusion that subsection S-7 of Section 75 of the bankruptcy act is unconstitutional insofar as it applies to the mortgage creditors of farm property," Judge Chesnut wrote in his opinion today.

"I am not unmindful of the considerations of public nature which induced the passage of this act by Congress, and in view of its obvious importance to great numbers of people in the country both mortgage debtors and creditors of farm property, I have considered the validity of the act as applied to them respectively to the very best of my ability in the light of settled principles of our fundamental law.

"It is the imperative duty of the judicial branch to declare the law invalid, if not inconsistent with the Constitution, which is the fundamental law of our country."

Bridge Order Imperiled Lives On Burning Ship, Inquiry Told

Inspector of Hulls Karl Neilson asked Hansen:

"Were there any marks of violence on his body?"

"Not that I saw."

Willmott, Hasen said, collapsed in his bathroom, partly clad. He was apparently preparing to bathe.

Officer Sharply Questioned.

Hansen, who holds a master's license, brought sharp comment from Neilson when he expressed ignorance about the fire indicating and control apparatus on the Morro Castle.

"Don't you think," said Neilson, "it is strange that a ship's officer should not be familiar with fire apparatus?"

Hesitatingly, Hasen said he knew something about some of the control apparatus.

Hoover had planned today to examine William F. Warms, left in command on Capt. Willmott's death, but the chief officer was not reached in the steady line of survivors who came to tell of the disaster.

One of the day's witnesses was Charles Maki—the second assistant radio operator—who, Chief Radio Operator George Rogers said, left the radio room and failed to return.

Returned to Engine Room.

Maki, sent to the bridge for orders, testified he made his way back to the radio room, around 3:30, and found it deserted. In previous testimony, it was shown Rogers was pulled from the burning radio room sometime around 3:25 to 3:30 by George Alagna, first assistant.

Rogers had testified flames were searing through the room when he was pulled out.

"How much fire was in there when you went back," Hoover asked.

"Not very much that I could see," Maki replied. "It was very hot, though, and there was a lot of smoke."

The investigation of United States Attorney Martin Conboy was held in abeyance during the day, inasmuch as the grand jury was excused for Yom Kippur, Jewish holiday.

Treasury Defends Use Of Cutter for Mrs. Owen

(Associated Press.)

Treasury officials said yesterday there was no reason to believe the Coast Guard cutter Champlain, on cruise to Greenland to take aboard Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, could have reached the scene of the Morro Castle disaster sooner than the Tampa or the Cahoon had she been on her regular patrol out of New York.

The statement was in answer to criticisms of the removal of the fast craft from her regular station to bring home the Minister to Denmark, and allegations that had it been on the job it could have reached the Morro Castle tragedy at least an hour before the slower ship which replaced it.

Herbert E. Gaston, assistant to Secretary Morgenthau and speaking for him, said, "It is incorrect that the Champlain was removed from patrol duty along the Jersey Coast. The Champlain is one of the three large cutters with station in New York harbor, any one of which is used from time to time for patrol cruises.

"The range patrol of a cutter on such a cruise," he explained, "would be from the vicinity of Montauk Point to the vicinity of Cape May, and it would have been a mere matter of remote chance if the cutter on such a cruise had been near enough to the scene of the burning of the Morro Castle to be among the first ships to bring aid."

Secretary Hull said Mrs. Owen was in Greenland as a guest of the Danish government to familiarize herself with the country.

Incendiarism Is Denied By Santa Rita Skipper

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 19 (AP).—When the Grace Line motorship Santa Rita docked today her master, Henry S. Stephenson, declared that the $40,000 fire which broke out on the ship last Friday could not have been of incendiary origin.

"The possibility of the fire having been set is out of the question," he said. "I am convinced that the cause was spontaneous combustion in cotton bales stored above the starboard shaft alley."

He said that the automatic fire alarm system which blows smoke into the bridge through pneumatic tubes when fire starts in any of the holds functioned perfectly. He added that most of the damage to the boat was from smoke.

Passengers told reporters that at no time was there any panic on board, and that they were impressed with the efficiency of the crew in smothering the blaze.

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 19 (AP).—Marie Campbell, 17, who disappeared from her home in Philadelphia on Labor Day and was found by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Campbell, in St. Vincent's Hospital here, was unable today to give them any coherent account of where she had been or what had happened.

She is in a serious condition, her lung punctured by one of several ribs broken Monday night in an automobile accident.

Mrs. Campbell said today her daughter attempted to reply to questions but seemed unable to give connected and rational replies. She is believed to have little chance for recovery.

Virginia's Largest Show to Be Held Today at Montpelier.

Orange, Va., Sept. 19 (Spl.).—Northern Virginia sportsmen will be well represented at the first annual bench show of the Virginia Foxhound Club, to be held tomorrow at Montpelier, estate of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Somerville, at Montpelier Station, near here, under the auspices of the American Foxhound Club.

The event, according to John C. Stewart, of Keswick, secretary of the club, will be the largest hound show ever held in Virginia, and will bring together some of the best hounds in the country.

An investigation conducted by Commonwealth's Attorney Bernard Mahone, of Caroline County, completely exonerated Garland Jones, a guard, of blame for the shooting. Witnesses said that Barron had been sullen for several days and did not stop when Jones called to him. The convict had previously received an added six months sentence for an earlier attempt to walk away.

Largest Single-Motor Plane for Army to Be Tested.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 19 (Spl.).—The largest single-motor plane ever built for the United States Army will be given its initial test some time this week at the Hagerstown Airport.

Officials of the Kreider-Reisner Airport Corporation, a subsidiary of the Fairchild Corporation, builder of the plane, refused to discuss the features of the plane, stating that any information would have to come from the United States Army.

The plane, for cargo carrying has been completed and is being assembled at the local airport. It is understood that it has been under construction for one years, during which time nummerous changes in its design were made.

The ship, under full load, weighs 13,000 pounds. It is powered with a Wright cyclone engine, with a variable pitch propellor which, it was said, will enable the plane to take off and land upon small airfields.

Fully loaded, it will have a top speed of 160 miles an hour, requires 75 gallons of fuel an hour to operate and has a capacity of 250 gallons in four tanks, two in each wing. The plane is 57 feet long, with a wingspread of 75 feet. The wheels when in flight fold up and can be drawn inside the body.

The initial tests to be made here will be with a light load. It is understood that Pilot Dewalt, of Baltimore, will take up the plane for these tests. The ship will be flown to Wright Field for its full-load tests, it was said.

Printed upon the fuselage is U. S. Army XC-31.

Warrenton, Va., Sept. 18 (Spl.).—Judge J. R. H. Alexander, before whom the citizens of Marshall, in Fauquier County, Va., placed a petition for incorporation in the courthouse here yesterday, will announce his decision Monday.

These projects have an estimated cost of $50,000 and would employ 50 men a month throughout the winter.

Inflation Hit By Darden in Opening Talk

Congressman Also Scores AAA Plan, in Campaign for Reelection.

Portsmouth, Va., Sept. 19 (AP).—Representative Colgate W. Darden, jr. (Democrat), has opened his campaign for reelection to the House with a speech here, in which he flayed monetary inflation and criticized some parts of the AAA program.

Speaking last night, Darden said: "It is manifestly unsound to be destroying cotton crops, killing hogs and curtailing corn and wheat crops by compulsion in this country when there are millions of people who will go cold this winter for lack of clothing and as many millions who will go hungry from lack of food to keep them from starving."

"With inflation I have no patience. I think it is unsound economically, and I think it is manifestly unfair and dishonest for this Government to make a man who borrows money today, when the dollar is worth so much in goods and labor, pay back that loan tomorrow with a dollar that is worth only half as much."

Darden said he could 'hold out no hope that the present peak load of 5,000 men in the Norfolk Navy Yard would be continued." He forecast a reduction to 3,600.

$25,000 Asked For Va. School

Loan From Literary Fund Sought for Building at Earlysville.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 19 (Spl.).—The Albemarle County School Board today requested the board of supervisors to join with it in an application for a loan of $25,000 from the literary fund of Virginia, to be used when the school building at Earlysville, which was destroyed by fire last winter, is replaced.

At best, this loan can not be granted by the State for approximately a year because of the great number of applications already approved, it was stated.

Supt. A. L. Bennett today said he has faint hope of securing Federal funds to materially aid in the construction of the building, but that he has no definite information as to what the Government plans, if any, will be concerning aid for school buildings.

When the Earlysville School was destroyed last winter, the school board furnished the material, and residents of the community provided the labor which erected seven temporary class rooms, now being used. The local school board hopes to use county funds only as a last resort.

Skeleton Sells for $10

Remains Found Near Norfolk Hang in Window and Finally Bring Customer; Fund Goes to Council Aiding Unemployed.

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 19 (Spl.).—Dead men's bones are valuable. At least one skeleton of a man was sold here this week for $10 and the money helped swell the pay roll of the Goodwill Council, which is giving jobs to the unemployed.

The skeleton had been on exhibition in a window for several weeks. It bore a "For Sale" tag but only two persons made inquiries about it. One was a colored man.

"Boss, I sho' would like to have that skeleton," he said.

"I sells medicine and if I could get some of my patients to rub their hands over dem bones I would sell plenty of my medicine. Any time one shivers he needs medicine and he sho' would shiver if his hands touched dem bones."

The man had only $2 and the Goodwill Council thought the skeleton was worth at least $5.

A young man and a woman companion gazed through the window at the skeleton yesterday. The man entered the store and said he would like to own it.

"I'm a medical student," he said, "and will give you $10 for the skeleton."

"It's yours," said the attendant. The skeleton was one of several found in excavation work near the outskirts of the city.

Gin Cost Raised To Avert Loss, Protest Reply

Virginia Board First Low Price Was Aimed at Bootleggers.

Richmond, Sept. 19 (Spl.).—Answering protests against a 5-cent increase in the price of Virginia's most popular gin, the alcoholic beverage control board said today that this brand's early price was fixed abnormally low in the war on bootlegging, and that the extra nickel must be charged to keep the State from losing money.

It was pointed out gin for 50 cents a pint is still available because a cheaper brand has appeared since the State went into the liquor business, but that the popular brand no longer can be sold for that.

It was explained that one of the more popular $1 a fifth whiskies went up 10 cents a bottle because the quality of the brand was improved. It was converted from a blend to a straight product.

Under the A. B. C. law the board can charge any price it desires for any liquor it sells. Patrons of the act in the Assembly predicted a time when all the bootleggers would be out of business and the board could raise prices to a point which would make it impossible for people to get cheap liquor, thereby promoting temperance.

Cumberland Grant For School Denied

Construction of Building This Year Doubtful.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 19 (Spl.).—It is doubtful if Cumberland will get its proposed central high school buiding this year. The grant of $200,000 which it was thought would be available from the Federal Government is not forthcoming, according to advices received by county officials.

They were counting this apart and had arranged for a county bond issue of $525,000 to make a total of $725,000 for the erection of the building. A site had been obtained.

The county's bond issue will be held in abeyance until the Allegany County Board of Education is assured the application for the $200,000 Federal grant is approved.

Stoves in Barns Warm Tobacco

Leonardtown, Md., Sept. 19 (Spl.).—Tobacco farmers in St. Marys County have placed stoves in their tobacco barns in order to combat the dampness which causes the cut tobacco to mold while hanging from the rafters.

Starting out with every prospect of an unusually good crop of fine tobacco this year, the heavy rains of August and early September threatened heavy loss, coming just when the crop was being stored in the barns to cure.

The artificial heat has proved most efficacious, and no doubt will become a regular practice in the future, farmers declare.

Sales Tax Plan To Get Relief Cash Proposed

Richmond Mayor Suggests Levy; Municipality League Convenes.

Staunton, Va., Sept. 19 (AP).—New sources of revenue for local relief, possibly involving the State government, tonight appeared to be a matter headed for official action by the Virginia League of Municipalities, which opened its twenty-ninth annual convention here today.

A Statewide general sales tax for relief was proposed by Mayor J. Fulmer Bright, of Richmond, who forcefully brought what he called "a critical long time problem" before more than 300 city officials assembled for the meeting. Subsequently he was appointed chairman of the resolutions committee which is to report tomorrow.

Mayor Bright estimated Virginia's relief bill will be at the rate of $4 per capita, or approximately $10,000,000 a year. He said the obligation to meet this cost should be three-fold borne by the Federal Government to the extent of 50 per cent and the remainder divided between State and local governments.

Extra Session Need Doubted.

Although some of the delegates privately and unofficially expressed a difference of opinion, Mayor Bright said he did not think the matter necessitated a special session of the Assembly for enactment of whatever legislation might be needed for procuring additional relief revenues. He said that although the cost of relief in Richmond had jumped from $56,000 in 1931 to an estimated $750,000 in 1934, he thought the municipalities of the State could "in some manner care for the situation until the regular session of the Assembly."

Bright said that under his plan a sales tax would yield approximately $4,000,000, which would be colected by an agency of the State government and revert entirely to localities in sums directly proportional to their respective payments.

William A. Smith, Virginia emergency relief administrator, summed up Federal relief in Virginia thus far and personally predicted, without authority, that there would be no more CWA funds granted the State this year and no more funds available for extending small town and rural school terms. This winter's relief, he said, would be in the form of help for other educational work and the white collar man.

Huge Parade Is Held.

Blame for untrained personnel of police and fire departments was attributed to "an indifferent public, sometimes indifferent city administrations and sometimes dumb police chiefs," by Capt. Albert Moore, of the New York State Police, who said "personnel training is here for your men free if you choose to take it." Capt. Moore is conducting police schools for instructors, under direction of the Rockefeller Foundation and the Virginia Police Executives Association.

In the intermission between the business sessions and the annual banquet and convention ball, Staunton, celebrating its "autumn festival," put on a huge parade with more than 60 floats and a dozen bands passing before a reviewing party headed by President West and ten other Virginia mayors.

U. D. C. Marker To Honor War Dead of South

To Be Unveiled September 25 at Orange County Celebration.

Orange, Va., Sept. 19 (Spl.).—As part of the Orange County Bicentennial celebration here September 25 to 28, the Thirteenth Virginia Regiment Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, here will unveil a marker at Greenfields, the home of Mrs. Phillip Seddon Boxley, in honor of the Southern soldiers, who were there the winter of 1863-64. The marker will be unveiled September 25 at 4 p. m.

The troops which the marker will honor were among those participating in the review of troops before President Jefferson Davis before the battle of the Wilderness, which opened the spring campaign of 1864.

Historic Point.

History relates that the green fields of the estate on which the ceremony is to be held were filled with soldiers and sounded with martial music as the review proceeded.

Gen. Lee led his troops on Traveler. William C. Williams, commander of the Sons of the Confederate Veterans of the W. S. Grymes Camp of Orange, was a small boy at the time of the spring review and can remember vividly the events of the affair. Mr. Williams has been invited as a special guest to the U. D. C. ceremonies. O'Conor Goolrick, of Fredericksburg, president of the Virginia Bar Association, who will be the principal speaker of the occasion, will be introduced by Mr. Severn M. Nottingham, president of the Virginia Division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

The marker will be unveiled by two great-grandsons of Gen. Robert E. Lee, Masters Robert and Hunter de Butts, of Upperville. Bobby and Hunter, aged 6 and 4 years, are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Hunter de Butts. Mrs. de Butts was before her marriage, Mary Custis Lee, granddaughter of Gen. Lee.

Marker's Description.

The stone marker will be a boulder quarried from the farm of W. F. J. Camper, where Gen. Lee had his headquarters during the winter encampment. The speaker's stand will be a candle stand made from the trunk of a sycamore tree by a soldier of the Army of Northern Virginia and used by Gen. Lee while encamped in this county.

Greenfields, the estate on which the ceremonies will be held, is a part of the original grant to the Taylor family of Orange and was owned by Mr. Tom Scott at the time of the review. The old colonial home was built in 1825 by Mr. Scott and in it were entertained many officers of the Southern army during the War Between the States. Mrs. J. E. B. Stuart was a guest there while Gen. Stuart was camped on Clark's Mountain, not many miles away.

Gliders' Trials To Open Today

World Records May Fall; Experts Entered in Virginia Events.

Big Meadow, Va., Sept. 19 (AP).—If the gods of wind and weather permit, two trim gliders will be thrown into the air here tomorrow to inaugurate the ten-day glider trials, which participants hope will result in the return of some of the world records to the United States.

Officials emphasized that, despite the good runway, the participants would be at the mercy of the wind. A northwest, southwest or west wind is needed, they said.

One sail plane with Warren Eaton, president of the American Soaring Society, as passenger and Harold Bowen as pilot, expects to take off as soon as the weather permits, with a secondary plane, piloted by Donald Hamilton, to follow it into the air.

Richard du Pont, of Wilmington, Del., a former holder of the world's distance record, was expected to arrive tonight and possibly to participate in the trials tomorrow.

Preparations for the flights are being made by Earl Southee, general manager of the American Soaring Society.

Among the records at which the glider pilots will be shooting is the 238-mile distance record established by the German, Dittmar, who also holds the altitude record of approximately 12,000 feet. Shultz, another German, holds the duration record of 36 hours in the air.

The American distance record of 158 miles is held by young Du Pont.

Fund Is Urged To Speed Farm Credit Loans

Baltimore Bank Asked to Keep Supply of Cash in Frederick.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 19 (Spl.).—Directors of the Frederick Production Credit Association, a unit of the Federal Farm Credit Administration, embracing Frederick, Carroll, Washington, Montgomery, Allegany and Garrett Counties and the District of Columbia, have recommended that a cash loan fund be set up at a local bank, to make loans through the association available in a much shorter time than under the present plan of having drafts sent from Baltimore.

The recommendation was decided upon at an all-day meeting of the directors and Thomas C. Darby, Gaithersburg, chairman, at local headquarters, and forwarded to the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank, Baltimore, which supplies money for the loans. H. S. Adams, secretary of the Production Credit Association, Baltimore, attended the meeting and favored the local fund, especially if the loan is for the purchase of fertilizer or cattle.

Under the proposed plan, funds covering loans will be deposited in a local bank and when loans are approved checks will be issued without delay.

Wheat Cut Changed.

Crisfield, Md., Sept. 19 (Spl.).—Somerset County contract signers will be asked to reduce their wheat acreage 10 per cent this fall, instead of the 15 per cent reduction which was in effect for the 1934 crop, according to an announcement of the county representatives of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Virginia Prepares Boundary Claims

Holt Plans War On 'Power Trust'

West Virginia Candidate Praises Roosevelt.

Herington, Kans., Sept. 19 (AP).—Rush D. Holt, young Democratic nominee for United States Senator from West Virginia, today termed the power trust "the most damnable institution in America" and avowed "I am going to help destroy it."

Holt, addressing the annual convention of the Kansas Association of Municipal Utilities, told of steps being taken to curb activities of "absentee landlords."

He detailed at length the Government's investigation of electricity prices with a view to reducing rates. Holt, who is 29 years old, one year below the minimum for Senators, praised President Roosevelt's utility policies. Holt, should he be elected, will be 30 when he takes office.

Joy and Gloom Meted To New Deal's Camp

Wisconsin Primary Results Apparently Encouraging to Democrats But Bilbo's Victory in Mississippi a Problem.

There were mixed feelings in the New Deal camp last night as leaders studied the returns from two picturesque primaries—in Wisconsin where Democrats polled a vote far in excess of the La Follettes or the old-line Republicans, and in Mississippi, where the senatorship was handed to former Gov. Theodore G. Bilbo, an unmanagable and quick-tongued crowd rouser, who promises to out-do Huey Long.

Wisconsin, long a lost-province for the Democrats, revealed a trend in Tuesday's voting which cheered Administration strategists here into thinking that they may sweep the State in November. The youthful La Follette brothers—Bob for Senator, and Phil for Governor—tried out their new progressive party which they hope may spread into a national movement if mass sentiment moves leftward in the next two years. The voting was awaited with keen interest as an indication of how popular the new party would be compared with the votes cast in the Democratic and Republican columns.

For the governorship, a total of 215,000 votes were cast for Democratic candidates, 155,000 for the La Follette Progressive party, and 146,000 by Republicans in their own three-cornered race.

For the senatorship, the five Democratic candidates gathered up a total of 181,000 votes; Senator La Follette received 137,000 in the Progressive party voting, and the lone Republican candidate 112,000.

Thus in both the senatorship and the Governorship voting a far greater number of voters identified themselves as Democrats than as Progressives or Republicans.

Primary Not Conclusive.

But two circumstances were noted to restrain any over-enthusiasm around Democratic National Committee headquarters. In the first place, primary votes are not an absolute index of relative party strength. There was a hot scramble among Democrats for the senatorial nomination, for instance, which tended to run up the vote. Senator La Follette was unopposed for the Progressive nomination and John B. Chapple was unopposed for the Republican nomination, so there was less pressure to get the voters out, perhaps, than the Democrats with their lively battle royal experienced. The total vote cast was far below the 1932 vote, when 1,108,400 votes were cast for President, as against 516,000 in the various governorship contests Tuesday, showing that half of the eligible voters in the State are not counted in the current figures. How this other 50 per cent will vote is what is going to make politics in Wisconsin interesting for the next six weeks.

The other fly in the Democratic ointment was the fact that in the five-way fight for the Democratic Senatorial nomination, the winner was John M. Callahan, of Milwaukee, who so far as the Roosevelt forces are concerned, has been a lean and hungry Cassius. He was a 100 per cent "Al" Smith man through to the bitter end in 1928 and 1932, and at the Chicago nominating convention two years ago his tall, thin figure could be seen in many a stormy huddle of the Wisconsin delegation when the Smith and Roosevelt factions were fighting it out.

Because of his strong Smith allegiance, Mr. Callahan was bounced out of the National committee by the Wisconsin delegation. Now, if he is elected, Mr. Farley will have to do business with him, and the chances are, in view of the Administration's conspicuous flirting with Senator La Follette, it is probable that Mr. Smith will insist upon payment through the nose.

Election Bargain Off.

Wisconsin Democrats would have been resentful if the Administration should have suggested a deal whereby it would support La Follette for Senator if La Follette would support the Democratic Governor, Schmedeman, for reelection. La Follette refused to enter the bargain and all bets were off, although President Roosevelt spoke favorably of Senator La Follette's service in the Green Bay speech, and the young Senator, who supported Mr. Roosevelt in 1932, is all for the New Deal except that he wants the President to go further.

The mingled emotions with which the news of Bilbo's victory in Mississippi was received arose from the fact that the Senate rules are free and easy permitting one Senator to hold up business as long as his breath lasts. It is known that Bilbo's lungs are in excellent condition.

He was compelled to drink a bitter potion here last winter when down on his political luck temporarily, Senator Pat Harrison tried to get a job for hm. The New Dealers were scornful but finally gave him an office in the Agriculture Department clipping newspapers, and despite his attempt to make the position sound as important as possible he received no end of ridicule and finally, when he decided to run for the Senate, he was told to leave.

Well, he is coming back now—for Democratic nomnation in Mississippi is certain election—and he has the memory of an elephant. He was around the AAA long enough to hear plenty and it may be expected that he will tell some of it on the Senate floor. The sedate and almost speechless Senator Stephens, who was beaten Tuesday by Bilbo, wasn't a 100 per cent Administration supporter, but he was reasonable and played the game as Mr. Farley prefers to play it.

Bilbo Stages Comeback In Defeating Stephens

Jackson, Miss., Sept. 19 (AP).—Tempestuous Theodore G. Bilbo, fiery former Governor of Mississippi, tonight gloated over his return to political eminence from the depths to which he was cast two years ago.

The campaign he said he launched on a shoestring and waged on a fare of "sardines and cheese" brought him a nearly 7,000 vote victory over United States Senator Hubert D. Stephens in yesterday's Democratic run-off primary for the Senatorial nomination.

On returns from 1,574 of the State's 1,641 precincts, the Poplarville preacher-politician had 100,730 votes as compared with 93,928 cast for Stephens, Congressional veteran of 22 years and professed friend of President Roosevelt.

Three other new faces entered the Congressional picture along with Bilbo's. The new Congressional trio in the Mississippi delegation is made up of District Attorney A. L. Ford, of Ackerman, who defeated Representative Jeff Busby in the Fourth District; State Senator Dan R. McGehee, who won over Representative Russell Ellzey in the Seventh District, and District Attorney Aubert C. Dunn, who won in a contest with Thomas L. Bailey, speaker of the State House of Representatives, for the seat Representative Ross A. Collins gave up to enter the first Senatorial primary with Bilbo and Stephens.

The vote in the Congressional races:

Fourth District — Ford, 12,606; Busby, 11,524 (nearly complete).

Fifth District — Dunn, 19,341; Bailey, 11,486 (nearly complete).

Seventh District — McGehee, 21,755; Ellzey, 19,715.

Ontario Woods Combed For 2 Boston Youths

North Bay, Ontario, Sept. 19 (AP). Dozens of forest rangers and volunteers continued an energetic search today for two Boston youths missing a week in the dense and trackless Temagmi Forest, 50 miles northwest of here. The men—S. P. Franchot and David Reisman—set out last Wednesday for a canoe trip around the forest reserve. The journey usually requires a day. Aviators made several perilous flights over the forest without finding a trace of the canoeists.

Roanoke Finds Officer Guilty

Former Treasurer Will Be Jailed for Embezzling Funds of City.

Roanoke, Va., Sept. 19 (AP).—Jacob H. Frantz, former treasurer of the City of Roanoke, today was found guilty of embezzlement of city funds and his punishment fixed at two years in the penitentiary and a fine of $250. A hustings court jury brought in this verdict at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon at the end of the two-day trial of the 65-year-old defendant.

T. Warren Messick, chief of defense counsel, indicated that he would offer a motion to set aside the verdict and was given permission by the court to make it tomorrow if he chooses. The case was heard by Judge James L. McLemore, Suffolk jurist, who was named by Gov. Peery to hear the case after Judge J. L. Almond, jr., entered an order disqualifying himself.

The jury retired at 3:51 and brought in its verdict after an hour and 39 minutes deliberation. Cautioned by Judge McLemore against any demonstration the crowded court room received the verdict in silence. The defendant remained seated with his son, his counsel and others in a cluster about him. When the verdict was read he closed his eyes and leaned his head on his right hand, with the elbow resting on the counsel table.

Commonwealth's Attorney R. S. Smith asked the jury in his closing argument to accept its responsibility with solemnity and render a verdict which would vindicate the laws of the State. Mr. Messick argued that the Commonwealth had failed to carry the burden of proof imposed upon it by the court's instructions and insisted that the prosecution was asking conviction of his client for "embezzling his own salary" and accepting checks of men whose credit was unquestioned.

The statute under which the defendant was tried would have made possible a maximum penitentiary sentence of five years and a maximum fine of $1,000.

Hahn and Spinks are named joint defendants.

THE MAN WITHOUT NERVES

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

"THE MAN without nerves" . . . such was the gay, careless verdict passed by his youthful neighbors upon the man whose utter absence of emotion made him truly inhuman . . . a monster parading as a model of propriety, a calloused murderer who deliberately snuffed out the lives of his best friends in his play for gigantic stakes!

NOT a false step did he take, and only one man . . . the least likely person in the world . . . caught by chance the faint incriminating clue which was to lead to his downfall.

A Reactionary Step.

Church and business leaders of New York City are denouncing the proposal to raise relief funds by establishing a municipal lottery, characterizing the plan as shocking and degrading to the moral sense of the community. Efforts to camouflage the nature of the undertaking by distributing prizes in the form of highly paid jobs for which the recipient renders no comparable service merely add a touch of hypocrisy to the proceedings.

Lotteries are now banned by every State in the Union and, since 1890, the Federal Government has denied the use of the mails to anyone who tried to promote them. That action put out of business the last State lottery—that of Louisiana—a private concern operating under license. The campaign against this peculiarly demoralizing type of gambling, which takes its toll from multitudes of men and women of small means, began about a hundred years ago. It is nothing short of a public scandal, therefore, for the largest and richest municipality in the country to undertake to revive a discredited antisocial institution as a means of alleviating social distress.

The financial position of New York City is not so desperate as to require resort to unlawful revenue-raising devices which are an affront to the better elements of the community. If simplicity of method is sought, the sales tax, whatever its theoretical undesirability, is a far simpler and more honest way to provide the required relief funds. Moreover, a very slight increase in subway fares would bring needed revenues to the city if it were not for the political cowardice that makes this source of income nontouchable.

The effect of New York's action upon other communities also has to be considered. It has already resulted in a discussion of the subject of lotteries as revenue producers in local budget hearings. Although it seems fantastic to suppose that Congress would authorize any such proposal for the District, hard pressed municipalities in other parts of the country may be more susceptible to the influence of a bad example.

The fact that many European and Latin-American countries have state or state-licensed lotteries is no excuse for a reactionary return on our part to systems that exist elsewhere as heritages of the past. The American people might be willing to endure the evils of State-sponsored lotteries in the present emergency if they had never been emancipated from them. But they can not afford to permit the attendant evils to be introduced into the country merely because they appear at first glance an easy way of raising emergency revenues.

The Local Housing Program.

No city in the United States can more readily sustain a building campaign than Washington. Thousands of families have moved to the District in recent months. A sharp increase in population is reflected by the expansion of Government bureaus, by the heavy registration of school children, by the unusual demand for houses and apartments. All of these factors seem to foreshadow an active demand for both renovation and construction loans here.

Before the recent influx of residents, Washington had a shortage of suitable living quarters in the moderate rental class. The scarcity of such houses and apartments is doubtless responsible, in large measure, for continued use of squalid alley dwellings. Now it appears that few of the better class units are vacant. Consequently, stimulation of the housing industry can be undertaken here on a sound basis if proper care is exercized.

Moreover, industrial employment and pay rolls in the District declined last month, while the country as a whole showed a slight improvement. Large sums are being spent locally for relief, which, under our present system of taxation, are a charge against homeowners. People who are in a position to modernize, renovate or repair their homes may, therefore, take advantage of the present opportunity to secure funds under a partial Federal guarantee, with reasonable assurance that it will prove to be a good investment.

There are a number of questionable factors in the Federal housing act. For example, it has been feared that some families would be encouraged to spend beyond their means. In the local campaign, which will soon be launched by John Poole, the new executive director of the Washington Better Housing Program, this danger is minimized by the active demand for good living quarters and by the relative security of Federal employes serving under Civil Service regulations. Partial restoration of Government salaries also will give some employes an opportunity to proceed with accumulated home repairs.

Some phases of the housing program may need modification, especially where they tend to jeopardize legitimate private enterprise functioning in this field. But since Congress has enacted the law, with the worthy purpose of stimulating the heavy industries and thus laying a basis for recovery, it merits the cooperation of citizens as well as of local business groups.

Arms And The League.

Figures just published by the League of Nations, and cabled to the New York Herald Tribune by its Geneva correspondent, place the total of the world's traffic in arms during 1932 at approximately 33,000,000 gold dollars. These figures, however, are not as large as they would be if the whole truth were told. In its survey the League points out that explosives are listed as chemicals by the governments which report to it, and that other subterfuges serve to make the estimates err on the side of conservatism.

Holland, Switzerland and Luxembourg, near neighbors of Germany, received large arms imports, the League report shows. This coincides with testimony on shipments to Germany made before the Senate investigating committee. Obviously weapons sent to these three pacific little countries in large quantities were intended for transshipment.

Japan and China also were heavy recipients of arms, according to League figures, splitting some $6,000,000 worth between them. South American states acknowledged receiving about $8,000,000 worth as the Chaco war was getting under way. All in all, the report offers a very accurate barometer of the international political situation of the year, with munitions exports, for the most part from France and Great Britain, flowing into the chief trouble areas.

Since its inception the League of Nations has had a mandatory responsibility for watching the private traffic in arms. The fifth paragraph of Article 8 of its covenant is devoted to this subject. It is this section which states that "the manufacture by private enterprise of munitions and implements of war is open to grave objections." And the same paragraph makes it incumbent upon the League Council to "advise how the evil effects attendant upon such manufacture can be prevented."

Though two years old, the figures made public by the League at this time are a striking complement to the revelations brought out by the current Senate investigation. This inquiry has already amply revealed that the arms traffic is an international problem, adequately and fairly controllable only through international action. The League report, which puts the United States a poor fourth among arms exporting nations in 1932, shows how little would really be gained if public opinion should clamp down on the industry in this country alone. Other nations would simply take over what we would give up.

Now in session, the League Assembly can not afford to ignore the disclosures made in Washington, which, even after proper discount made, are far too disquieting to be stopped at the point which has been reached. The need is not for heading off further inquiries in this country, but for getting them started in other nations which have offended even more against the moral code symbolized by the phrase "merchants of death."

On the strength of what has been made public in Washington, and with its own statistical data as further incentive, the League has an urgent duty to perform in redoubling its efforts to bring about a practical method for the international control of the private traffic in arms. No matter how altruistic and enlightened the sentiment of the United States may be, no one country can move toward any effective solution of the evil without cooperation along an international front.

Poison Gas.

Mussolini's blustering war talk is bearing fruit. The Duce has said so much about the coming war as to make its advent much more probable. His conscription program, said to be the most sweeping peace-time mobilization in history, is a natural outcome of his belligerent predictions.

Italy has a standing army of about 457,000 men and more than 6,000,000 reserves. Considering both groups, nearly 15 per cent of her population is already under arms. Military service is, of course, already compulsory for Italy's young men. But Mussolini is not satisfied. His mania for swashbuckling has led him to the extreme policy of prescribing instruction in the "art of war" for children 8 years of age.

The Duce's new decree is literally intended to "transform the citizen into a warrior." In their most impressionable years boys will be placed in contact with the army for the purpose of teaching them the traditions of military life. Later they will be pressed into actual service, so that every able male Italian will become a soldier. Training will continue intermittently until the "warrior" has passed the age of 33. Before those who are now 8 reach that age they should be able to find someone who will oblige them with a whiff of grapeshot.

So long as Mussolini merely talked of the coming of war he was not especially impressive. But the advertised preparations for hostilities on an immense scale arouse grave misgivings. "War is in the air," he says. He does not add that his strutting, saber-rattling policy does much to keep it there.

An Enforcement Test.

A large number of instances of violation of crop-control contracts by wheat growers have been brought to the attention of the AAA. Although an unofficial estimate of 1,000 such cases is a relatively insignificant figure contrasted with the many thousands of acreage agreements that have been signed, it indicates the existence of evasions extensive enough to create a serious problem for the Federal Government.

Suits for restoration of benefit payments fraudulently obtained and additional penalties for breach of contract would be in order. But the authorities naturally hesitate to risk the political repercussions of wholesale prosecutions. Furthermore, the decision to let county control associations handle cases of contract breaking outside the courts seems better on general grounds. It will afford a significant test of the ability of local farmer organizations to give effect to a voluntary as opposed to a compulsory kind of output control.

The problem of restraining an ever-present, noncooperative minority that works against group interests for the sake of immediate selfish gains is a very difficult one to meet. There is no middle ground between stern self-discipline and submission to Governmental decrees, if there is to be any real control over productive processes through agreements among producers. Attempts at such control must either be abandoned in the absence of effective voluntary association, or the Government must resort to drastic regimentation of individual recalcitrants.

Power And Responsibility.

In his radio speech on Tuesday night the president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce made two points of very profound significance regarding the current textile strike. They are the more deserving of public attention and consideration because both apply not merely to this strike but to the whole dangerously disturbed field of industrial relations.

Mr. Harriman's first point emphasized certain elementary facts: that rapidly increased labor costs normally mean higher prices; that prices which rise more rapidly than general purchasing power involve a decline in consumption; that reduction in consumer demand necessitates economies which must inevitably to some extent fall upon labor. In other words, business has no inexhaustible till from which to draw its expenses. And when there is a declining market, industrial pressure can force increasing wages for a privileged group only at the expense of other producers and consumers.

The United Textile Workers have refused to recognize this basic truth. The very notable gains brought to the employes of that industry by the codes have been regarded not as tentative advantages to be consolidated by careful cooperative action, but rather as an appetizer for more. In military parlance, the U. T. W. has pushed ahead of its supports. It is trying to conquer ground which is disputed not so much by the employers as by the invincible pressure of cold economic facts.

The unions' insistence on viewing the problem from the standpoint of what is selfishly desirable instead of what is socially possible led Mr. Harriman to his second point. That is the absence of a sense of responsibility on the part of organized labor in any way comparable with the industrial power which it wields. Whether or not Mr. Harriman is correct in saying that "the strike was called in an industry where much less than half of the industrial workers desired to strike," is debatable. But it is not debatable that the union has ignored all larger National interests in launching at this time what is proving an exceptionally bitter and fruitless struggle.

Nobody any longer doubts the great power of organized labor. Few question its ability to make very constructive contributions in our complicated modern society. But the greater the power, the greater the social obligation.

The fact that the unions wield the former while frequently ignoring the latter accounts for much of the opposition to their recognition by many employers who are not at all reactionary in their social outlook. There is undoubtedly logic in the union claim that until organized labor receives recognition its policy must be aggressive rather than cooperative. But if the present vicious industrial circle is to be cut, organized labor must show much more clearly that it has the will to cooperate for National advantage as well as the strength to fight in its own behalf.

Velvet.

Clank in the daytime; swish in the early hours of the evening; and undulate into bed at night—such appears to be fashion's edict. Great wooden bracelets, dresses loaded with cellophane and strange heavy beads take care of the clank. Taffeta makes as loud a rustle on ballroom floors this year as it did in the days of our grandmothers. And now we read that velvet nightgowns are to transform even the most prosaic housewife into an exotic, if somewhat unfamiliar, woman.

Paris classifies them as "hostess gowns," says they may also be used as dinner gowns and, in some rare cases, as evening frocks. What a boon to the housekeeper! No frantic, hurried dressing to prepare breakfast in the mornings for hubby on his way to the daily grind. One simply slips out of bed in an enticing shade of raspberry velvet or midnight blue, as the case may be, and lo and behold, one resembles the slinkiest movie star while toasting the bread and frying the eggs. It has not been determined yet whether velvet is enhanced by the addition of grease and dishwater but that is an intriguing deduction left for the future.

Velvet nighties may even pave the way for happier homes and more attentive husbands at the breakfast table. What stock quotation of the present era could possibly be as interesting to a man as the sight of a velvet-clad female opposite, pouring his coffee? What matter depression, codes, taxes when a veritable vision serves the bacon?

But it is just a little sad to think that we must thank Paris, not Washington, for this truly distinctive contribution to the "more abundant life."

Referring to a man who robbed a bank in order to pay his debts, a moralist asks, "But who would condone such an act?" We really couldn't say, unless perhaps his creditors might.

A person has the right to say what he pleases in this country, and you have the right not to listen to him if you don't want to.

Man is that foolish creature that shortens his life by working hard in order to acquire things which further shorten his life.

Germs live indefinitely on a dollar bill.—Science note. Wish they'd tell us how they do it.

Strike Arbitration.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Where is this industrial unrest headed for, and what is going to be its solution?

Strikes lead to mob violence and often death. Congress and the various States should pass a law making it a felony for a labor leader to call a sympathetic strike, punishable by a heavy fine or imprisonment, or both. No labor leader has a right to bring injury to innocent people, and Congress and the various States have a right to protect them.

I concede the right of labor to strike in those plants where they have a grievance and can not get a fair settlement of their demands, but there is always a better way of settling strikes. Congress and the various States should pass compulsory arbitration laws. Capital and labor should be made to abide by such laws when they can not agree among themselves.

The arbitration board should consist of eight people (two of whom should be chosen by the industrial group, two by union labor and four appointed by the President of the United States), consisting of one member from the farmers, one from the professional group, one from the retail merchants and one from the nonunion labor group, the President having the deciding vote in case of a tie. This would give the consumers a look-in along with capital and labor in labor disputes—something they never have had the privilege of doing before, although they pay the full bill in the end.

Labor has become intoxicated with the gains made under the NRA and has completely lost its head, and it is time for it to sit up and take notice before it is too late. Labor has a right to reasonable wages and hours, but is making too many demands under present conditions. Capital likewise must give some grounds to bring peace to industry and advance the interest of the Nation. W. H. JEFFERY.

Exeunt Omnes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Anent the recollections of Henry George:

The famous author of "Progress and Poverty" was addressing an audience in Union Square, New York City, near the spot on which he made his last public appearance. He was interrupted by an auditor with this question: "Mr. George, if you had all the land in the world and I had all the money in the world, what could you do?" "I could tell you," answered George, "to get off the earth and you'd have to get off."

Thank You!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At a recent meeting the Berryville Chamber of Commerce voted its appreciation on behalf of this community for the reporter coverage you gave the Berryville Horse Show held here August 23 and 24, and for the fine stories of this event you published in your paper.

We are deeply grateful to you for this interest in our community.

Wanderbird Plume.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I went on my first hike two weeks ago with the Wanderbirds and enjoyed it so much I wish to express my appreciation to you for supporting such a fine project. I would like especially to commend Mr. Shosteck on the well-planned and interesting excursions he has given us since I have joined the group.

The Transit Problem.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your paper announced on September 11 the purchase of the property of the Washington Rapid Transit Co. by the Capital Transit Co. This acquisition is no doubt in the public interest, but the value of the property must be considered under the law by the Public Utilities Commission. The commission will no doubt make a thorough investigation and give consideration to the essentials of an appraisal report including, among other things, such items as:

Purpose of the appraisal.
Date of valuation.
Extent of field and office investigation actually made.
Classification of property as tangible or intangible.
Description of property showing its character, location, extent and use.
Complete accounting data.
Report on land owned, if any.
Original cost to date.
Cost of reproduction.
Depreciation.
Appreciation.
Other values and elements of value.
Statement of the economic, engineering, accounting and legal principles upon which the appraisal is made.
Qualifications of the appraiser including a statement that he is in fact disinterested and independent.

The operation of the buses and street cars as a unified system is desirable for the better accommodation of the public, and the principal question which is open for discussion is the fair value of the Washington Rapid Transit lines.

A Bigger Coast Guard.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of the lessons taught by the Morro Castle holocaust is that it was neither smart nor economical to weaken the Coast Guard.

Too many associated the Coast Guard only with its distasteful duties in connection with the eighteenth amendment. Too many subscribed to the idea that the Coast Guard could be absorbed, eliminated or abolished when liquor became legal.

The Army, Navy and Marine Corps are built on appropriations obtained on the quite proper platform that life, property and happiness of our people can not be valued in dollars and cents. The "payoff" comes when war threatens or actually is declared.

Why, then, choke an outfit that makes war on storms, maritime disasters and a hundred and one other duties 365 days of every year, peace or war?

While the Navy has been building up in strength of tonnage and personnel, the Coast Guard has been slashed to the bone. Ships decommissioned, turned over to the Navy, bases closed up, personnel cut to the minimum. A fine corps of sea-going warrant officers transferred to CCC and other Army duties.

The Morro Castle proved that the Coast Guard should not have been so heavily reduced. It has never had the strength it needed in its great history of saving life and property at sea since 1790.

A Heroic Priest.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to thank you for publishing a dispatch from Mexico City September 9 which told of a mute protest of the Mexican people against the government's war against religion. Because the Mexican people desired an end of religious persecution and the right to practice their religion they were brutally clubbed by the police.

I wish to thank you also for publishing another dispatch which told of the heroism of Father Egan, who stood on a companionway of the blazing Morro Castle to give his blessing and conditional absolution to the frightened passengers—many of whom would soon face God in judgment. The priest is still among the missing.

The Mexican people know that the priest is their true friend; that he will defend and protect them under all circumstances, and that, if necessary, he will lay down his life for his flock.

Sweet Corn's Forbears.

The Smithsonian's "fossil" ear of corn that turned out to be a clay rattle reminds the world of the antiquity of maize. And because it is such an ancient crop we are likely to think of our Indian predecessors, both North and South, as enjoying the delectable sweet corn which is now one of the harvest pleasures of our table. But although all Indian corn belongs to a single species, sweet corn is nevertheless younger and much less widely distributed and known than the ordinary milling or fodder corn which so largely sustained pre-Conquest America.

It is very difficult to grow in the tropics of either hemisphere, even at heights that bring a cold or temperate climate, and the dainty Golden Bantam, Evergreen and Country Gentleman which cook to melting sweetness in five minutes, brought in from Northern gardens, are unknown in corn's ancestral home, Mexico and Peru. The Indians, who in a thousand years or more coaxed this grain from a wild grass into its present waving grace, never foresaw the epicurean nubbins now being husked in our kitchens.

Shall we ever know just how vast a labor that coaxing was—how long it took? Probably not. Until very lately it was believed that the original plant was already extinct in the days of the Aztec Empire, but not long before her death Mme. Zelia Nuttall presented in "The Journal of Heredity" evidence which may change that opinion. In a volume published in 1746 the Cavaliere Boturini, who had spent eight years of study in Mexico, reported a native tradition that the first agriculturists happened to taste some grains of wild maize that had been roasted in a forest fire, and found them so good that they collected unscorched seeds to plant. The traveler added that he himself had discovered a maize growing wild "in the forests of New Spain" more delicate in flavor than the cultivated.

This prototype, if it existed, may well have become extinct through the mad process of burning forests (to chase out animals and to clear and fertilize with ashes future plantations) which laid waste so much of Mexico and which is followed in the Sierra even today. Recently, however, Oliver La Farge told of finding in the Guatemalan mountains a wild plant resembling oats without the beard and "having the unmistakable flavor of corn." This was used by the natives between crops. Whether or not it is likely to be identified as the ancestor of cultivated maize, science has not yet declared, but it is certain that we shall never in our lifetime see that epic of Indian agriculture rehearsed.

The Post Impressionist

How Cartaret Escaped.

Postoffice, Thursday.

TALK of that hideous disaster off New Jersey had drifted into talk of submarines and torpedoed ships, during the World War. Cartaret, who had been a war correspondent, said:

"We'll call the transport I crossed on the 'Axonia,' though that wasn't her name. She was small and superannuated; yet she carried, besides a couple of hundred unattached officers, and so on, two raw regiments of engineers—one from the Pacific Coast and one of railroad men, from nearly everywhere. Tinned sardines are resting in the great open spaces, compared to the way we were packed into the 'Axonia.'

"The sub scare was at its height, too. We were turned out for 'abandon ship' drills during meal hours and in the dark—just to calm our fears, I guess. But the more drills, the plainer it was that, if a torpedo ever did strike us, nobody'd have the ghost of a show. And we'd no convoy: the rumor was that a British cruiser would pick us up at Halifax.

"At that port—although, of course, we weren't told where we were—we sailed in a fog and a circle, all one night, around a tolling bell buoy. When the sun broke through, we headed out to sea between two other boats. The one uncomfortably close astern was a transport overcrowded with Canadian troops. The one dangerously close ahead (I got this from our first officer) was riding low because she was loaded with TNT; if we happened to bump her—— Well, you can imagine!

"That was our little guardian into the sub zone.

"All this was jumpy enough, but, just to put us completely at our ease, seasickness swept the 'Axonia' like cholera in a coolie camp. I've crossed the North Sea during rough weather in a freighter. I've knocked around (and that's the right phrase) the Bay of Biscay in a destroyer. Those two bodies of water are supposed to be the liveliest in the Occident. The kind of pitch and roll that a freighter can't do in a North Sea storm a destroyer joyfully performs in a Biscay calm. But though the Atlantic was only choppy this trip, I never saw a seasicker lot than the thousands of men we carried.

"The officers couldn't put their men through the manual of arms: there weren't any arms for the manual. When they tried to march their troops, the troops simply collapsed.

"Then there was the cheerful band. That Coast regiment had a scratch band. It played on deck the first day—played the only piece it knew: 'Home, Sweet Home.' The second day, it began to play, and then, one after the other, the musicians rolled over into the scuppers. I saw the bass horn flattened; the second cornet went overboard.

"Morale went overboard, too.

"We did make some efforts to keep it. For instance, the few well folk organized a so-called Masonic lodge; at least, the Masons among us did, after testing one another—and it turned out nearly all the officers and a lot of the men were Masons. The ship's captain was a Mason from Robert Burns' lodge—Scotch, anyhow. There were New York Masons, District of Columbia, Pennsylvania, and plenty of West Coast Masons. Rough work, what? Long later, New York's Grand Master Scudder scolded pretty hard about our 'clandestine practices.'

"But the morale went, just the same.

"There was a steward in the smoking room who'd been saved from the torpedoed Franconia, a pale, dank, sad man. Somebody made the mistake of asking him to tell his experience. After that he did nothing else. We all ended by regretting his escape. . . .

"We'd sit around the deck or in the jammed staterooms and speculate about our chances: were they as high as 5 per cent, or just one-half of 1? We'd repeat gloomy rumors. Hugh Wiley, the humorous short-story writer, was an engineer lieutenant; the things he invented on that voyage proved he's really an Edgar Allan Poe.

"When we were a day off the Irish coast, our frame of mind was—well, the mind was about ready to step out of its frame. And we got orders to put on our life belts and keep 'em on night and day. Did you ever try to sleep in a life belt? You never succeeded, because it can't be done. But did you ever try? It puts the hat on terror.

"Well, the morning we sighted the Irish coast, right at the sub zone's edge, we sighted something else. It was a tramp, off our port bow, flying the Norwegian flag. The British TNT tub heliographed her—she put on full steam ahead.

"Somebody said: 'That's an old trick of the German craft that are sub screens.'

"Somebody else yelled: 'Look there!'

"And, sure enough, between us and the scudding tramp, was a sort of tilted stick, dancing in the waves. I was on the bridge. The ship's captain said: 'Aye, it's a periscope.'

"Lower decks and upper, the men crowded to port: their combined rush was 'most enough to capsize us. We had a 10-year-old gun astern, and we'd organized an amateur gun crew. They manned the iron. An amateur gun crew aboard the Canadian transport blazed away, too. But what chance had such crews to hit a periscope?"

Cartaret paused. "It wasn't a nice experience," said he.

"Still," we remarked, "you didn't lose your life."

"Oh, no; I escaped," said Cartaret. "That 'periscope' turned out to be a wooden target that some preceding transport had thrown out for its amateur gun crew to practice on. But it was not a nice experience at all."

Barging Through Europe With Carlisle Bargeron

A Putsch!

Berlin—One of the most interesting games they play over here is known as the Putsch. I gather that it is about as popular as our baseball except that it has not yet been professionalized. One does not pay to see it. A fellow just starts one and everybody who wants to join in does so. At the outset there was considerable complaint from the mothers who thought the game entirely too rough. The dangers have been greatly minimized now, however, and I get the impression that the risks are not much greater than in our football.

BARGERON

In some respects it reminds me of our snipe hunting, the game with which our rural folk often entertain the visiting city slicker. At least the novice has to keep on his toes not to be left holding the bag.

• • • •

The putsch I played, or it would be better to say "went on," was one grand lark for my German companions because I didn't know what to do and was badly frightened all the time. I was determined to see it through, however. The thing has such an appearance of reality, Aleck, that it makes cold shivers race up and down the spine.

We met by prearrangement on a corner here three blocks from the Adlon Hotel. Without any ado we got into high-powered automobiles and raced across the country to Munich. Racing across the country in high-powered automobiles is quite a customary thing in this country, Aleck, particularly on the part of the Nazi leaders. If the Kaiser and his subordinates strutted or shot about in fast automobiles any more than the present leaders and underslungs I should hate to have been here. The Nazi leaders have everything in the way of vanity except the monocle and some of them even have that.

• • • •

However, I am disgressing. As soon as we arrived in Munich, almost as quick as it would take to tell, we bounded into a beer parlor and our leader shouted to the assembled beer sippers (I translate): "Come on fellows, a putsch, a putsch!"

They jumped up excitedly repeating "a putsch, a putsch." Never have I seen a crowd of fellows respond so quickly to an idea.

But, Aleck, I had not entered into the spirit of the thing. I had had no beer at all and it looked to me as though the thing was too artificial. It didn't have the naturalness that I desired. So I protested.

"Oh, let's do it right. Let's first get full of beer."

"Ja, ja, you are right," our leader agreed.

So we sat around and had several steins of beer. We became more and more putsch-minded with each stein. Finally I felt a full putsch glow come over me. I got up and shook myself to see if the feeling would last with me on my feet. Reassured, I nodded to the leader that I was ready.

• • • •

He had been chafing at the bit, so to speak, so he immediately jumped up and shouted (I translate again):

"Everybody ready, a putsch, a putsch, a putsch for Herr American!"

"Ja, ja," they all chorused, "a putsch for Herr American."

When they kept saying "Herr," Aleck, I thought they had in mind some girl and insisted that it was I who wanted the putsch. "Ja, ja," they agreed, and out of the place we raced to get back in our high-powered automobiles. Through the night we traveled, clipped off the German kilometers with the facility of a sausage knife.

Over the border we raced and into Austria. It is impossible to describe my feelings, Aleck. My blood tingled and adventure and the cool night air blended to give a healthy intake for my nostrils. The beer had warmed me and made me feel expansive. I distended my stomach until I was as round as a butter ball. I felt competent to be master of all I might survey.

• • • •

In a way it reminded me of the prohibition raids we used to have in the States and just as I used to be prepared to be the first one out of the car so as not to be left behind by the agents as they darted into the speakeasy so I was determined now to keep up with the crowd.

In Vienna we drew up quickly in front of a steel grated door on the front of a small castle-like place.

"It is here," my companion giggled, and they tumbled out of the car with me tumbling right after them.

As if by prearrangement a footman opened the door and we raced upstairs and killed three chancellors, turned and raced down again, bolted into our car and raced for a tower to see the fun. The French papers immediately began screaming that hell had again broken loose in Europe and the Italians rushed 100,000 troops to the Austrian frontier.

When the troops had all been drawn up and inspected and had brought their rifles to the point of firing, our leader appeared holding up his hand:

"Just a putsch for Herr American," he explained. "Thank you very much."

The French papers quit screaming and the Italian soldiers shrugged. "Oh," they said, and marched back to their barracks in the interior.

Chicago G. O. P. Coup Nets Party $65,000

Cook County Republicans Sell 360,000 Tickets to Fair at $1 Each; Purchasers Admitted to Concessions, Hear Democrats Assailed.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19 (AP).—Cook County Republicans were still chuckling tonight over the full house they dealt themselves at the World Fair on Constitution Day, with Democratic leaders for the main part content to remain silent on their opponents' financial coup.

At G. O. P. headquarters a staff of accountants were busy figuring out how much the county organization's sponsorship of Constitution Day at the fair would mean to the party treasury.

Julius H. Miner, chairman of the Republican County committee's finance department, said the receipts from the sale of bargain tickets to the fair would net at least $65,000, adding that first reports that the profits would be from $100,000 to $125,000 were too high.

It was Miner who conceived the idea of buying up all of the fair's most popular concessions for the day and selling bargain tickets through the Republican organization. Billed as a nonpartisan celebration, the Constitution Day program brought a crowd of nearly 360,000 bargain visitors to the fair.

360,000 Saw the Sights and Heard Speeches.

THE 360,000 received for $1 the right of admission to the grounds and 22 concessions, plus the privilege of hearing three speakers lambast the policies of the Democratic National Administration.

Democratic Mayor Kelly, who was prevailed upon to issue a proclamation for the day, belittled the Republicans' coup.

"The crowd went there to take advantage of the bargain rates," he said. "They didn't care anything about the speeches. Not one out of a hundred heard them, anyhow. And if the Republicans were smart enough to make themselves some money out of it, I guess there's nothing we can do about it."

At Springfield Gov. Horner, who also issued a proclamation, declined to comment.

A trip through headquarters of the Democratic party of Cook County failed to uncover any Democratic leader who cared to say anything.

Originally the Republicans had planned to hold a huge Constitution Day pageant at Soldier Field and charge admission. They found that on the night preceding Constitution Day a free pageant, "The Drama of Chicago on Parade," was to be given at Soldier Field.

Dropped Pageant Plan As Unprofitable.

REALIZING that it would be difficult to get the customers to kick in with cash money for a pageant right after having seen one without charge, the Republicans sought a new plan. Miner conceived the idea of a bargain day at the fair and got busy.

He interviewed the concessionaires and offered to pay them in cash, in advance, the average amount they received on a good Monday if they would honor all the tickets he issued. They agreed. The result was the largest day's attendance of the 1934 Fair.

Miner tonight said that the concessionaires had received about $40,000 and that Republican workers who sold the tickets got more than $80,000 in commissions. He estimated that overhead expenses and the World's Fair gate share would take about $125,000.

After deducting all expenses, he said, he expected the county organization to net about $65,000. More important, he said, was that the 360,000 visitors were exposed to the Republican slogan of "Stick to the Constitution," devised to fight the Democratic plea, "Stick to the President."

Virginia Realtors To Ask Tax Shift

Income Basis Proposed in Real Estate Levy.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 19 (AP).—The committee on taxation of the Virginia Real Estate Association, meeting here today, decided to suggest to the association's convention, to be held here October 19 and 20, that support be given to legislation to tax real estate on the basis of income derived from it.

Serious consideration also was given to a proposal for a general, or consumers' sales tax and the recommendations of Berkley D. Adams, member of the House of Delegates from Charlotte County, that taxation of intangibles be placed on a basis more comparable with the taxation of real estate.

"Steadily declining rents during the past several years with little or no reductions in the tax levy on real estate in the cities of Virginia have made taxes confiscatory in many instances," C. V. W. Trice, of Norfolk, said in presenting the income tax plan to the committee.

Petitioners Lose In Vote Recount

Winner in Anne Arundel Gets Greater Total.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 19 (Spl.).—Recount of the vote cast for sheriff in the Republican primary in the Second District, Anne Arundel County, only served to increase the total poll of Joseph W. Alton, successful candidate, instead of showing discrepancies advantageous to Carl H. Shipley, petitioner, who polled the highest vote of three defeated candidates.

The official returns gave the victory to Alton by a 10-vote margin, the county totals being Alton, 801; Shipley, 791.

Shipley asked a recount of the Second District because of the heavy vote for Alton. It is Alton's home section. First returns gave Alton 341, and only 38 for Shipley. When the election supervisors completed the recount, it showed Alton had picked up 4 votes, whereas Shipley's total remained unchanged, so that Alton's final county plurality over Shipley was 14.

Lynchburg P.-T. Elects.

Lynchburg, Va., Sept. 19 (Spl.).—The Lynchburg Federation of Parent-Teachers Association has elected these officers for the present school year. President, Mrs. John Wyatt Davis; vice president, Mrs. George Snead, and secretary-treasurer, Mrs. R. A. Owen.

Labor Tells Peery Of Danville Row

But He Awaits Report by Rhodes for Action.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 19 (AP).—Gov. Peery this afternoon heard from the lips of labor spokesmen an account of the incident at Danville Monday night when a group of Hopewell workers there to attend a union meeting was escorted from the city and four of them were arrested.

Following the conference, which was attended by State Commissioner of Labor John Hopkins Hall and his assistant, H. W. Furlow, the Governor said that he had listened with interest to the account given him but that he did not plan any action until he had conferred with John Q. Rhodes, State motor vehicle commissioner, who is at Danville in command of a detachment of 25 State officers.

Reports from Danville indicated that the situation there was quiet and that the textile mills were not picketed, nor had there been any materialization of rumors that picketing groups from North Carolina would invade the city as an aftermath of the Monday incident.

Brilhart to Head Democratic Group

Other Officers Appointed by Maryland Body.

Westminster, Md., Sept. 19 (Spl.).—C. Robert Brilhart, Manchester, tax collector of Carroll County, was named chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee at an organization meeting held here last night.

Other officers named were Mrs. Howard B. Necker, Mechanicsville, secretary, and William Conaway, Westminster, treasurer.

Reports submitted by committeemen from 20 out of 26 election precincts at a meeting of the Republican County Central Committee last night revealed that 526 Republicans and 656 Democrats registered prior to the primary election.

Small Farmers Held Hostile to Conditions

Norton, Va., Sept. 19 (Spl.).—Returning from a tour of Dickenson and Buchanan Counties, Bruce Crawford, Independent candidate for Congress, reports "dissatisfaction with present conditions among the small farmers.

"Most of the farmers are too small to receive Government payments," Crawford said. "Only the large commercial farmers have benefitted and the increased costs of living are offsetting any gains the larger farmers have made."

A President in Exile

Like Napoleon in exile on the lonely Island of Elba, a modern world figure who was cast out by his country is living on the quaint little Caribbean Island of Santo Domingo today, dreaming of a return to power. He is Cuba's deposed dictator-president, Gerardo Machado. Forced to flee his native land by a frenzied mob howling for his life, Machado found haven in the Dominican Republic. But though his home is a palace and his personal fortune runs into millions, this man lives in constant fear of assassins.

You will want to read this informative, thoroughly interesting article by A. D. MacCoy, who has recently returned from Santo Domingo City, where he viewed the former Cuban dictator at close range.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

The Phoenix Nest.

IN the Saturday Review of Literature Mr. William Rose Benet, a poet and, moreover, a gentleman of sense, conducts a column of poetry criticism under this happy title, "The Phoenix Nest." As Ovid told his generation, and as 1,600 years of subsequent readers took as Gospel, the phoenix was a resplendent Arabian bird of considerable size which lived 500 years, built itself a nest of cinnamon and myrrh on the top of a palm tree and there died. From its corps sprang a little phoenix, and thus the cycle kept on. Not until Sir Thomas Browne, he of the marvelous musical sentences, gave a chill look at the myth in "Vulgar Errors" (1646) was so pretty a fable disbelieved.

THEO. HALL.

• • • •

W. H. Auden has a large, ambitious wing and no lift. His work comes to us surrounded by typical British fanfare in so handsome a volume that I had far rather spend this time in talking of print and binding than in discussing the contents. Random House did the format superbly—"Poems" ($2.50) would grace any shelf. But inside lies scarcely anything which I can recommend to any but esoteric (and therefore dangerously vulnerable) readers.

We are told that Mr. Auden stands at the forefront of modern British poets. All I can see there is a frenzied effort to praise "modernity." For Mr. Auden's poetry (I use this word with some qualms) is "modern" in the sense that it is innately rude to the reader. It is jumbled, confused, and only fragmentarily intelligible. No amount of high talk about "originality and forcefulness"—I quote from the blurb—can gainsay this primary fact. There is no "originality" in mumbled jargon; there is no "forcefulness" when, ninety-nine hundredths of the time we do not even know what the man is talking about.

This is the more provoking in that Mr. Auden uses English words in English sentences. There are fine phrases—"spring's green preliminary shiver." And all about is a kind of glowing excitement of great things to be said. But (this page would not hold the size of that but) they are never, never said; the cannon is trained, and out pops a dried pea.

• • • •

Mr. Auden's most famous item is "The Orators"—a long, impressively odd melange of prose, verse, notebook jottings and diagrams. Parts are vaguely amusing; parts show the first "preliminary shiver" of sense. But I see nothing truer than Mr. John Sparrow's judgment on this piece of writing: "As it is, his work is a monument to the misguided aims that prevail among contemporary poets, and the fact that on the strength of this and similar performances he is hailed as 'a master' shows how criticism is helping poetry on the downward path."

It took me 108 pages of persistent and unrewarded reading ("Discerning readers of verse will find incitement (sic) and exhilaration in his dynamic writing," promises the blurb) before I sensed the reason for Mr. Auden's antics. I apologize for my denseness. Then on page 109, there began this passage: "An old one is beginning to be two new ones. Two new ones are beginning to be two old ones. Two old ones are beginning—" but that is quite enough.

Mr. Auden avows homage to the barren hand of Miss Gertrude Stein. Hic jacet.

• • • •

As handsomely bound but less well printed is another little book of verse—"Poems," by Stephen Spender (Random House, $1.50). Mr. Spender and Mr. Auden were of the same generation at Oxford, now stand as England's bid for poetic laurels.

Mr. Spender wins over Mr. Auden hands down. The poems in this book are intelligible, lyric, filled with sharp-eyed phrases. Mr. Spender appears best in description, as in these opening lines on "The Express:"

"After the first powerful plain manifesto
The black statement of pistons, without more fuss
But gliding like a queen, she leaves the station."

But let us come up on another flank—what has he to give us? Here are pain and dismissal of the present pinch-belted, mechanical world; here is hurt at incompleteness; here is nostalgia for—

"The names of those who in their lives fought for life—.
Who wore at their hearts the fire's center."

But the eye running over the ends of his poems, over his solutions and exhortations, finds no strength there—only a hazy dependence upon poetic generalities, only such a cry as: "Oh comrades . . . advance to rebuild . . . advance to rebel." Which is all very fine, but says nothing.

One thing—Mr. Spender is frank. He tells us, with hypochondriac explicitness, his whys and wherefores. You see the trouble in his moods, in the gender of his personal pronouns, most plainly in the poem which starts:

"My parents kept me from children who were rough
And who threw words like stones and who wore torn clothes."

He is built on distance, on unroundness, and no matter how penetrating his voice we can not accept it as the message of, or the hope for, his generation.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The President at the Yacht Races.

("President Roosevelt attended the yacht races but kept in touch with the textile strike and other important matters."—News item).

President—Who's ahead now?

Aid—The textile strikers, I believe, sir.

President—No, no; I mean in the yacht race.

Aid—It looks like the Rainbow, sir.

• • • •

President—Vanderbilt is a very canny skipper. I think he probably has had more experience than Gorman.

Aid——Gorman, sir?

President—My mistake. I was thinking of that textile crisis again.

• • • •

President—Who's leading?

Aid—The Woonsocket is out ahead of the Fall River by two ultimatums, now, sir.

President—What's going on out there now?

Aid—It looks to me as if they're breaking out their Genoa pickets, sir.

President—Don't I hear the radio? See what the message was?

Aid—It says there's been more rioting in Rainbow, R. I., and that two more mills in Sopwith have been attacked.

• • • •

President—Is there any word from Johnson?

Aid—No, but he seems to be handling the Endeavor very nicely, sir, from all I can see.

• • • •

President—Any news from Sloan?

Aid—What boat is Sloan on, sir?

President—Don't be silly, Mr. Sloan is spokesman for the grommet and halyard interests.

Aid—I haven't any word from him, but it looks to me as if he is about to tack. They're rounding the bouy now.

President—Who?

Aid—The mediation board.

• • • •

President——Here's another radio message. Read it to me, please.

Aid—It says the garment workers are determined to go out unless they get their demands.

President—What are they demanding?

Aid—Hollow masts and bona fide ship's quarters, sir, unless I am confused. Look!

President—What now?

Aid—They're having trouble with the spinnakers.

President—The Rhode Island or Carolina spinnakers?

Aid—There! See? They're coming about.

President—About what?

Aid—I think it's about the use of troops in labor difficulties. But maybe I'm mixed up.

President—Could it be that we are both mixed up?

Aid—Shiver my boom timbers if I don't think it a distinct possibility, sir.

Taking Life Seriously.

An Englishman went up in an airplane, had motor trouble, fell, and landed on the top of a cage of lions the other day. It was at this point that he began to think it a mistake for a man to get around so much.

A Yale professor has flown from New Haven to England and will continue in an attempt to fly around the world. His idea probably is to make sure he will not see any Yale football this fall.

With "Ducky" Pond, famous wet field runner, as head coach, the Yale football squad has been training at Gales Ferry, crew headquarters. So don't be surprised if during a critical moment in the big game this season a Yale player signals for a fair catch under the Thames railroad bridge or calls for the triple oar play.

Dual Road Urged Over Luray Area

Dr. Johnson Offers Plan to Enlarge Lee Highway.

Luray, Va., Sept. 19 (Spl.).—Dr. S. M. Johnson, of Washington, "father of the Lee highway," in Luray today declared that this road should and will be a dual highway to Luray.

"The Lee highway is just entering upon its second stage, the realization of which will do fully as much as has beeen done thus far for the welfare and prosperity of Pace County," said Dr. Johnson. "The Lee highway is to be made a dual highway, and we are concentrating upon the Washington-Luray-New Market section. We will have a 200-foot right of way landscape, and a 30-foot strip with low shrubbery flanked by two pavements, 20 feet wide, each for one-way travel.

"From Centerville, 23 miles out of Washington, an additional strip, 120 feet wide, will be acquired.

"The present Lee highway will be one of the roads for one-way travel and on the additional 120 feet there will be a new 20-foot road. We also plan to have a bridle path from Washington to Falls Church, then extend it to Centerville, Warrenton and Luray."

Mary Rainey Group to Meet.

Crisfield, Md., Sept. 19 (Spl.).—Mary Rainey Group of the Woman's Missionary Union, which includes Somerset and Wicomico Counties, will meet in the Rehoboth Baptist Church tomorrow, beginning at 10:30 a. m. Mrs. S. R. Barnes, State secretary, will teach a mission study class, "The Book Keys of the Kingdom."

CLIFFORD LANHAM, superintendent of trees and parking, District of Columbia. He entered the service of the department more than 40 years ago as water boy when his father held the same post his son now holds. A native of Lanham, Md., named after his grandfather, he has directed campaigns to save, restore and retain shade trees in front of houses and wherever their presence would add to the beautification of Washington. Knows his trees, too. Loves them. Collects rare species. A river man, he has a boat and likes the water. Friendly, courteous, he's known as the best spinner of yarns in the District Building. Tall, thin, with an angular but genial face, he is beloved, admired, almost as much as he loves his trees.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

Explorer's Work Is Little Good If He Forgets Way Home

By Robert Quillen

Nothing under heaven ranks higher than pure science. For science is the study of facts and facts are true, which means that a scientist is one who searches for truth.

It may be conceded that the successful search for truth is man's greatest achievement; but in the process of doing great good, the scientist has unintentionally done great harm.

Awed and mystified by the miracles of science, laymen have attempted to keep pace with progress by imitating the mental attitude of the scientist. And the result has been disastrous.

A little learning is a dangerous thing. Knowing how to start a car is dangerous knowledge unless one also knows how to stop it.

The scientist doubts and questions. He takes nothing for granted. He will not believe until he sees the proof. In his quest for truth, he ignores all assumption, legend, custom and precedent.

And this attitude of unbelief is what the people have copied. They doubt and think their doubts scientific. It has become smart to disbelieve.

But this is mere playing at science, as children mimic the manners of their elders in playing grown-up.

The scientist is not content with doubting. Disbelief is a means to an end, not the end itself.

Unbelief is a tool he uses to clear away the rubbish of superstition and error and falsehood.

But he clears the ground for a purpose. That is merely a necessary beginning—a preparation for building. On the cleared ground he begins the erection of the structure of truth.

Laymen have learned to doubt but not to build. They have discarded the old faiths and found nothing to take their place.

Man's nature requires a spiritual anchorage. He must have some creed or tenet, if only a belief in tribal loyalty, whereby to judge his own merit, justify his self-respect and achieve a sense of spiritual security.

The happiest people in America are the destitute Negroes in the South. They know that God is running things.

Bank Given Stock For Canceled Note

Judges Authorize Deal in Maryland Merger.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 19 (Spl.).—Chief Judge Hammond Urner and Judge Arthur D. Willard, in an order filed in the circuit court yesterday authorized John J. Ghingher, receiver of the closed Central Trust Co., to turn over to the Washington Trust Co., Ellicott, Md., syndicate managers, a canceled promissory note for $24,000 in exchange for 1,075 shares of the Central Trust Co. stock.

A short time prior to the closing of the Central Trust Co. a merger of the latter company and the Washington Trust Co. was effected. Later the Washington Trust Co. instituted proceedings in the circuit court asking that the merger be dissolved on the ground that the Central Trust Co. was insolvent at the time of the merger. The court ordered the merger dissolved and required the Central Trust Co. to return the assets of the Washington Trust Co.

Last December the court ordered the Washington Trust Co. to turn over to Mr. Ghingher 1,243 shares of the capital stock of the old Central Trust Co., having a book value of $37,290, in exchange for the promissory note of the syndicate managers. Henry Owings, one of the syndicate managers, in a petition to the court, listed the names of 55 persons holding 1,004 of the shares which he was ready to turn over to Mr. Ghingher. Stock of the Central Trust Co. was given in exchange for stock of the Washington Trust Co. at the time of the merger of the two banks.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

Three Pictures.

I have seen only three movies this summer and for different reasons I enjoyed all three.

The first was George Arliss in "The Rothschilds." That is a very fine picture and the acting of Arliss is superb. The whole story is well told, from the beginnings in poverty to the affluence that accompanied Waterloo. Yet, although I have no word of criticism against the picture, it was not nearly so good as the actual play on the same subject I saw in Germany in 1912. That truly great comedy was called "The Five Frankforters" (Die fuenf Frankfuerter) and was the story of the mother Rothschild and her family. It is one of the best plays in the twentieth century; and yet some how when taken away from Germany and played in English, it lost its charm. For after its great success in German, I saw it twice in English—once in London and once in the United States. All plays which depend on conversation and character can never be so good in the movies as they are with real actors.

On the other hand, I have just seen the motion picture "Treasure Island." This is not only one of the best movies I ever saw—I certainly never enjoyed any movie more—but it is so superior to the regular drama "Treasure Island," that there is no comparison at all. Years ago I saw an excellent version of "Treasure Island" given by the able actor and manager, Charles Hopkins. It was so successful it ran a year; and it deserved its success. But the picture is ten times more effective. The reason is obvious. In the picture you have marvelous scenes which the romance calls for, and which are entirely beyond the possibilities of the legitimate stage. I must also compliment the makers of this splendid picture on the magnificent cast—Lionel Barrymore, Otto Kruger, Jackie Cooper, Lewis Stone, and the incomparable Wallace Beery. For two hours I was held spellbound.

The third picture I saw was "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Again"—and it was a disappointment. Bulldog Drummond is my favorite hero of murder and mystery stories; and the picture got only a small part of the effectiveness of the novels. It was not dull, but it ought to have been much more exciting. My attention wandered. Futhermore, it was irritating to see the vulgar and gratuitous insertion of stuff that was meant to appeal to the sniggerers. I remember the same vulgarity in the movie of "The Admirable Crichton." I do not believe that vulgarity in such plays is commercially valuable; and as it has no possible other value, why drag it in?

It would be ridiculous to say that such pictures are immoral; they are rather immature.

'27-'29 'Mad Delusion' Topic of Baruch Book

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Bernard Baruch, financier, who returned today from a European trip on the Majestic, announced that he had completed the section of his autobiography dealing with "The Mad Delusion of 1927-1929." Mr. Baruch went abroad partly for recreation and partly to study public baths in European cities, in behalf of the mayor's committee on municipal baths.

Barron Collier, advertising executive, and Maria Jeritza, opera singer, also returned from Europe.

Darryl Zanuck Makes Good an Early Promise

Biographers Kept Busy; Yacht Races on Screen; About Showshops.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Darryl Zanuck refuses to be swerved from his original purpose. Evidently intent upon making Twentieth Century's second year of production as noteworthy as its first, which ended in a blaze of glory with the release of "The House of Rothschild," starring George Arliss, Mr. Zanuck, vice president in charge of production, has swung into action, although he has hardly had time to recover his land legs since returning to America from the European capitals and a big-game hunt in Africa.

In keeping with his early-season announcement that the lives of colorful and famous personalities will play an important part in the forthcoming production schedules of Twentieth Century pictures, Zanuck has signed three of modern literature's prominent biographers for service in his studio. They are Gene Fowler, R. J. Minney and Cameron Rogers.

Working on Screen Play.

Minney recently arrived from London for the adaptation of his book, "Clive of India," as a vehicle for Ronald Colman. With W. P. Lipscombe, also in Hollywood at the present time for work on the story of the celebrated general, he wrote the stage version of the story which has been running nearly a year in the British capital.

Cameron Rogers, author of one of the best-known books on Richelieu and his times, is now working with Nunnally Johnson in research for "Cardinal Richlieu," George Arliss' next starring vehicle.

Gene Fowler, whose biographical works, "The Great Mouthpiece" and "Timberline," have been best-sellers, is now in collaboration with Bess Meredyth on the screen play of "The Mighty Barnum." It is based on M. R. Werner's popular book, and is to have Wallace Beery in the title role with Adolphe Menjou featured.

Mr. Zanuck also makes known that Clark Gable will be individually starred for the first time in "It Had to Happen." Gable has enjoyed top billing on frequent occasions, but always has been compelled to share it with some other actor or actress. "It Had to Happen" will mark a milestone in his career in that it will impose upon him for the first time the responsibility of bearing full stellar honors unassisted by an equally prominent associate.

Tom Baily, publicity director at the Paramount studios in Hollywood, will arrive in Washington on Wednesday, October 3, for a three-day visit to meet drama editors, sales executives of his company and theater operators on matters of common interest. Mr. Baily is one of the West Coast's most helpful scriveners and will be a welcome visitor.

Dots and Dashes.

There are said to be ten persons in Washington who will have particular reason to welcome the celebration of its seventh anniversary by Loew's Fox Theater, beginning tomorrow . . . First there is Mrs. W. W. Steiner, 1353 A street northeast . . . Mrs. Steiner bought the first ticket ever sold at the Fox, back in September, 1927 . . . Second, there is Mrs. Mary C. Williamson, Portland Hotel, who bought the second ticket . . . Mrs. Williamson is Mrs. Steiner's mother . . . Then there is a group of notables still resident here who were guests of the management at a special invitational performance the night before the public opening of the theater . . . All of these have been invited by Division Manager Carter Barron to attend tomorrow night's performance as the theater's guests . . . Speaking of guests, those who attended the perfectly appointed "British banquet" preview of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," at the Shoreham Tuesday night, also had themselves a time . . . The introductory ceremonies were exceedingly ne plus ultra and the broccoli, plum pudding, champagne, et cetera, even more so, but the real piece de resistance of the evening was the screening of the picture itslf . . . Seeing it for the second time within a fortnight, I was surprised to find it better than I had thought at first . . . Which was very, very good, indeed . . . Here is a film that will be up there when it comes time to make Academy awards and choose the so-called "Ten Best Pictures of the Year" . . . You don't hear so much about them as you do of Norma Shearer, Fredric March, Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Sullivan and Una O'Connor, but Ralph Forbes and Flush, the spaniel, prove themselves a couple of swell actors, too . . . I trust Dick Powell, contrived to reach Washington early enough last night to get the sleep he looked forward to so eagerly in Philadelphia on Monday . . . And got it . . . In Master Powell's entourage is Bert Perkins, former picture exploiteer in this territory, with whom, in an earlier incarnation, I once plotted some of the most outrageous publicity stunts ever pulled on an unsuspecting and credulous public and press . . . And got away with them, too, without being either shot as a felon or tossed into the big house as a thoroughgoing rogue . . . All of which we recalled at some length and with great wonder at the temerity of our comparative youth over a mess of matutinal ham and eggs at Tom O'Donnell's early yesterday morning at 1 p. m. . . . Tom used to be an old film man himself, before he went comestibly maritime . . . You would think that after winding and unwinding so many reels of film, he would have gone in for spaghetti instead of ersters . . . Or maybe he thought pictures were a shell game . . . When Dick Powell opens at the Earle tomorrow, by the way, he will find himself working with practically the identical stage bill that has surrounded him at the Earle in Philadelphia all this week . . . Albertina Rasch Girls, and everything . . . All done up in georgette crepe, or something . . . Almost as concealing as cellophane!

This week's newsreels are supplanting the gruesome details of the Morro Castle holocaust with extensive footages of the America's Cup yacht races being held over a triangular course off Newport, R. I. The Metropolitan Theater began showing these pictures yesterday morning. Both the British challenger, Endeavour, and the American defender, Rainbow, are shown from many angles during the actual course of the racing.

Personal Aside.

Well, you Pierce Hall Players, you brought it on yourselves, but it isn't too late yet to stay home tonight, when this typewriter is billed to be your season's first speaker. And don't say I didn't warn you!

In Openings Today and Tomorrow

The film version of this Damon Runyon story opens today as the second screen feature of the Rialto Theater's new season. Dick Powell, in Person, Will Be Earle's Magnet Opens Here Tomorrow; Fox Birthday Program; Other New Bills.

Dick Powell, who, since his last appearance in Washington a year ago last May, has established himself as one of the most popular young stars of the screen, will make a week of personal appearances at the Earle Theater, beginning tomorrow. He will be supported on the stage by Collins and Peterson, who contribute their own familiar specialty and serve also as masters of ceremonies; the Albertina Rasch Dancers from Hollywood, and Ray and Sunshine. The screen feature will be "Desirable," a romantic drama in which the principal roles are played by Jean Muir, George Brent, Verree Teasdale and John Halliday. The program will be completed by "Good Morning, Eve," a Technicolor short, starring Leon Errol, with Maxine Doyle; the Universal News and orchestral overture with Bert Granoffs' vocal interpolations.

* * * *

For the week beginning tomorrow, Loew's Fox Theater announces an anniversary bill of imposing proportions. In celebration of its seventh birthday anniversary, a gala stage bill has been assembled by Division Manager Carter Barron and Production Manager Gene Ford, including Yascha Bunchuk, cellist, a hit at the Fox last month; the Pat Rooneys, 2d and 3d; Herman Timberg and Herman Timberg, jr., and their comic crew; Arthur Godfrey, radio personality, and Eddie Perkins, the singing usher; Ernestine Gardner and Julia Cunningham, local artistes; a chorus of 24 beauties and a ballet of 65. The screen feature for the week will be "Servants' Entrance," starring Janet Gaynor and Lew Ayres, with Walter Connolly, Ned Sparks, Louise Dresser, Siegfried Rumann, G. P. Huntley, jr., and others in support. The Fox Movietone News and Prof. Lampkin's overture will complete the program.

* * * *

"Million Dollar Ransom" is the title of the Damon Runyon story that will be presented in film form on the screen of the Rialto Theater for the week beginning today. The leading roles in this up-to-the-minute melodramatic romance are played by Edward Arnold, Mary Carlisle and Phillips Holmes, with Andy Devine, Wini Shaw, Robert Gleckler, Marjorie Gateson, Edgar Norton, Bradley Page and Henry Kolker. The program will be completed by short screen subjects, including the Universal News,

* * * *

Norma Shearer, Fredric March and Charles Laughton are the three stars who will take possession of the Palace screen tomorrow in the principal roles of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's screen version of Rudolf Besier's "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." This triumvirate of artists will be assisted in the depiction of the romantic love story of Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning by Una O'Connor, Maureen O'Sullivan, Ralph Forbes and many more. Sidney Franklin, who also directed "Smilin' Thru," is responsible for the direction of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street."

* * * *

In "The Case of the Howling Dog," to be seen as chief screen feature of the program announced for the week beginning tomorrow at the Metropolitan Theater, Warren William, Mary Astor, Helen Trenholme and Allen Jenkins are cast in the roles of prime importance. The story is a murder mystery of the most eerie sort. Grant Mitchell, Gordon Westcott and Helen Lowell are among others of note in the cast. The program will be rounded out by "Paree, Paree," a two-reel musical comedy, starring Bob Hope and Dorothy Stone; Little Jack Little in a "Pepper Pot" specialty, and a 15-minute newsreel.

* * * *

With United Artists' new screen version of Dumas' "The Count of Monte Cristo" matching the attendance records set up by such popular successes as "Little Women" and "It Happened One Night," announcement is made that this attraction will be continued for a second week at RKO-Keith's.

* * * *

"Chained," the M-G-M production starring Joan Crawford and Clark Gable, with Stuart Erwin, Una O'Connor, Otto Kruger and Marjorie Gateson in support, after having scored a two-week engagement at the Palace, will resume its F street run as foremost feature of the bill to be inaugurated tomorrow at the Columbia Theater.

* * * *

"Naughty Nifties" is the title of the burlesque attraction that will bring "Sliding" Billy Watson to the Gayety for a week's engagement beginning with the customary Sunday matinee. The star of this new production will be supported by Clyde Bates and Jack Hunt, comics; Art Nealy, singing master of ceremonies; Dan Trent, Phyllis Barron, Jean Lynn, Jackie Lamar, Peggy Hill and scores more.

D. C. Society Gathers at Polo Match

Diplomats, Army, Navy Well Represented at Potomac Park.

Mexican Envoy Is Host to Secretary and Mrs. Hull.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

A beautiful day for sports; a perfect polo field; two crack army teams, and military splendor. That was the impression of the Potomac Park polo field yesterday afternoon at the first game of the international polo matches between the United States Army team and the Mexican Army team.

Members of the Cabinet, diplomats, Army and Navy men and women, and a smart gathering of resident society were on hand to cheer on the United States team, while the Mexicans, with their brilliant play, were not lacking an enthusiastic gallery.

A broad expanse of green grass; goal posts at one end of the field of red, white and blue; at the other end, red, white and green; packed stands, champing ponies, tense players visiting from one box to the other, cherry halloos to friends in the smartly costumed crowd and, above all, inspiring, tantalizing music by a military band, were present.

National Anthems Played.

Before Mr. Louis E. Stoddard, chairman of the United States Polo Association, tossed out the ball to start the game, with the players of both teams drawn up at attention before the official boxes, the band played the Mexican national anthem, "Himmo Nacional," and "The Star-Spangled Banner."

A parade of the ponies was staged at 3 o'clock with the two teams, the Mexicans in their dark-gray jerseys with wide orange stripes and shining silver helmets; the United States team in dark blue and white striped jerseys with white helmets.

The arrival of the Ambassador of Mexico, Senor Don Fernando Gonzalez Roa, in sartorially perfect morning coat and top hat, with his guests, the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull, was a signal for activities to begin. Others in the Ambassador's party were the Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern, the latter in a powder blue tweed suit with a hat to match; the Assistant Secretary of War and the lovely Mrs. Harry H. Woodring and the Military Attache of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Azcarate. Mrs. Woodring wore a tweed suit of pine green with a felt hat to match and white blouse, and Senora de Azcarate was in black.

The box of the Chilean Ambassador, Senor Don Manuel Trucco, was occupied by the members of the embassy staff, who had as their guests Mrs. Hugo Rennert, Mrs. Sidney Gest and the Attache of the Belgian Embassy and his attractive Chilean wife, Mme. Walravens wore a black tailored suit with a black felt cloche hat.

In another box were the Spanish Ambassador and Senora de Calderon, the latter wearing a navy blue crepe frock with a turban of the same material. With them was their young daughter, with her pretty copper-colored hair so well set off by her dark green frock and beret. Next to them were the members of the staff, the Minister-Counselor, Senor Don Luis Irujo, whose charming Mexican wife has not yet returned from a visit in her native country; the Second Secretary, Senor Don Ramon Padilla y Satrustegui, and the First Secretary, Senor Don Luis Olivares. With them were Mrs. William T. Mann, wearing an ensemble of soft gray crepe and satin with a hat to match, and Mrs. McKenney Mallan, in a brown woolen suit with a small brown hat.

The German Embassy was represented by the Counselor, Dr. Rudolf Leitner; the first secretary, Mr. Ernst Meyer, and the naval attache, Capt. Robert Witthoeft. Mr. and Mrs. Carlos del Mar, who had entertained at luncheon before the matches, had in their box the Minister of Egypt and Mme. Djalal, and the Naval Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Sable. Mrs. del Mar was in a black frock of wool crepe, trimmed with white satin, and a black felt hat with a brightly colored quill. Mme. Djalal was in black with a deep shoulder cape of sable, and Mme. Sable wore a brown and beige printed gown with a brown hat.

Admiral Land in Box.

Mme. Bobkowska, only daughter of the President of Poland, Mr. Ignace Moscicki, wore a printed frock with a black coat and hat, and Mme. Moscicka was in navy blue.

Others there were the Military Attache of the British Embassy, Col. Maurice Fitzmaurice Day; the Second Secretary of the Canadian Legation, Mr. D'Arcy McGreer; Mrs. Alex Legare and Miss Janet Ball, daughter of Mrs. Henry Winfield Watson.

War Neutrality of Red Cross Endangered, Declares Official

Miss Mabel Boardman, Volunteer of Long Standing and High Position, Fears Organization Too Much Identified With Peace-Time Work.

By Elizabeth Young.

THE Red Cross, international emblem of neutrality in time of war, is in some danger of losing it's primary significance.

The public's increasing tendency to associate the symbol with peace-time humanitarian endeavor is viewed with some misgiving by Miss Mabel T. Boardman, Washington social leader, whose more than 30 years' selfless volunteer service to the American Red Cross is chiefly responsible for the organization as it exists today.

"I have always believed we must not get away too far from the original purpose of the Red Cross, which was to be prepared for war relief," Miss Boardman said yesterday at the Sulgrave Club. "And yet there has arisen that tendency in America. There is danger, should war come, that the organization might prove to be out of hand."

Her Diagnosis of Danger.

The danger, as Miss Boardman sees it, is that the emblem might fail to command the spontaneous war-time respect and recognition so necessary to the discharge of it's essential function — ministering to war-time wounded.

"Of course, it's a very good thing for the Red Cross to have something constructive to do in peace time; an organization which defers action until the coming of war or disaster necessarily sustains a loss of vitality.

"It was to obviate this possibility we develop the full-time program for mitigating human suffering that characterizes Red Cross work today."

She graphically summarized the breath-taking scope of peace-time work, much of it volunteer, taken over by the Red Cross. Two years ago, 695,000 volunteer workers gave 18,000,000 hours to health-aid work in the United States. Last year, over 300,000 persons cheerfully contributed without pay to furthering the program.

Amazement and Explanation.

"But why do they do it? What do they get out of it?" her interviewer asked in amazement. "What powers of persuasion do you exert?"

Miss Boardman is internationally recognized as the moving spirit behind volunteer service in the American Red Cross. She has been a member of the central committee since 1905, and National secretary since 1919, serving without pay.

Miss Boardman's eyes glowed. Her fine, disciplined, thoughtful countenance grew radiant. (She looks not unlike Her Brittanic Majesty, Queen Mary. In fact, the likeness is striking, as the Prince of Wales involuntarily admitted on catching a first glimpse of her during his visit to this country in 1919. "Great Heavens," he gasped, clutching the arm of an aid. "There's mamma.")

"By acquainting people with the immense satisfaction that comes of lightening others' burdens," she replied. "By affording them an outlet for their better nature. Women of wealth and position have frequently told me they've never been so happy in their lives as when doing Red Cross work!

They Give Themselves.

"That's because they're giving—not money; after all, the giving of money necessarily depends on one's means and one's generosity—but because they're giving of their very selves. When it comes to giving yourself, invariably you give the best that you are. And the best of each is the same stuff as the best of all. It brings everyone into a wonderful kinship.

"It's a moving experience."

Miss Boardman has never been conscious of any drain on her strength in appealing for support of the Red Cross.

"Rather, it's a pleasant experience asking people to give," she smiled.

"But facing an audience thinking in terms of what it can give is another and an inspiring experience. And that's the mass emotion I've always dealt with on behalf of the Red Cross."

Miss Boardman sails October 5 from San Francisco for Japan. She will be one of six American delegates at an international Red Cross conference to be held in Tokyo October 20-30, in conjunction with the annual meeting of the Japanese Red Cross.

Others going by various routes are Judge John Barton Payne, chairman of the central committee of the American Red Cross; Mrs. August Belmont, of New York; Augustus Pope, of Detroit; Eliot Wadsworth, of Boston, and Henry L. Sims, of Birmingham, Ala.

China's Women Do Their Part In Public Life

Returned Voters' Official Says Oriental Feminists Progressing.

TODAY the women of the Orient recognize the opportunities that await them in public life. And they feel the need to organize to battle for their own rights and those of their children.

Mrs. Anne Hartwell Johnstone, who has just returned from a six month's tour of the Orient, yesterday told enthusiastically of these signs of progress among Eastern women. Mrs. Johnstone since her graduation from Leland Stanford University, has made a special study of international relations. She has just been named secretary of the Department of Government and International Cooperation of the National League of Women Voters.

"The progress made by these women is all the more amazing when we consider they had to throw off fetters that have never bound Western women," she said.

Interested in Government.

"The Government offices in China are full of young women who are interested in Government. About one-half of these have studied in other countries, but the universities in China are beginning to admit women. And some Chinese women's colleges even have women presidents today."

Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, wife of the head of China's national government, is a leader in women's organizations, and is intensely interested in public affairs, says Mrs. Johnstone.

"It is largely due to her influence that Chinese women are taking such an active part in public affairs today," she says. "The young women are especially concerned about labor problems. They are trying to pass laws forbidding child labor and providing better working conditions for both men and women.

One of the most active women's organizations in China is the joint committee of Shanghai women's organizations, according to Mrs. Johnstone.

"This is made up of women's clubs representing 16 different countries," she said. "And they work together for the good of China. Last year they held an institute on child labor, this year they held one on housing problems which was helpful and instructive.

Aren't Imitating West.

"The women of the Orient, however, do not wish to imitate Western women in their club and public welfare work. They want their organizations to be native to the Eastern world and to grow out of their own civilization."

The women of China are not alone in their new interest in public affairs, Mrs. Johnstone points out. In Manchuria, Japan and the Philippine Islands she found interest equally great.

"The frontier spirit seems to pervade every part of life in Manchuria," she says. "The whole country give the impression of being vitally alive, and the women are taking an active part in the work of building up the nation.

"Women in the Philippines are so interested in the coming independence of the islands that they have organized themselves into groups to study the best laws, to study educational methods and l[illegible]or needs. They are expecting to vote when the islands receive their independence, and they want to be able to vote intelligently."

In every country Mrs. Johnstone visited she says she found the women opposed to war.

"These women believe war can be prevented by intelligent international cooperation," she says. "Even when China and Japan were fighting, the women in both countries were exerting pressure, trying to persuade the officials to settle the dispute peacefully."

Equal Rights Meet Will Attract Voters

International Alliance to Convene in Istanbul.

Twenty-four women, selected as delegates and alternates by the National League of Women Voters, will comprise the United States representation at the Congress of the International Alliance of Women for Suffrage and Equal Citizenship, to meet in Istanbul, Turkey, next April. The delegation will be announced early next year.

The National League of Women Voters is the only member organization of the alliance in the United States. Auxiliaries in 39 other countries will send delegations to map out the alliance's world-wide work in behalf of suffrage rights, equal moral standards, equal conditions of work, improvement of women's civil status and promotion of world peace.

Charity Gains Through Her Persuasion

Internationally recognized as the person chiefly responsible for the American Red Cross organization as it exists today, Miss Mabel T. Boardman has a record of more than 30 years' volunteer service to the cause. She has been National secretary since 1919 and member of the central committee since 1905.

Texas Game Commissioner Only Feminine One in World

Mrs. Hal Peck ("Sweetie" to Her Friends) Thinks Her Job Is Fine and Merrily Hands Out Information About the Fish Situation in Her State.

UNTIL last year the members of the Texas Game Commission were, traditionally, staid and very mature and always masculine. "A band of old cow men, and proud of it," they said of themselves.

Then what was described by the men as "a shocking event" occurred. A woman, and a young woman, at that, was appointed game and fish commissioner.

"But they are used to the idea now and we get along fine," confided the woman intruder, who is Mrs. Hal C. Peck, of Amarillo.

The only feminine game and fish commissioner in the world proudly displayed her blue and gold badge. She is a merry little creature, who rattles off statistics about the game and fish situation in Texas as if she were telling a funny story. She punctuates the figures with jolly little chuckles, and her brown eyes crinkle at the corners as she tells of her adventures. Her friends, she says, call her "Sweetie."

Cattle Registered, She Wasn't.

"In fact," she confided, "that was the only name I had until I was ten. Then I went away to school, and when I found I was the only girl there without a real name I named myself Josie. My parents never got around to naming me. And in that day people in Texas were too busy registering cattle to register babies, so they just kept on calling me 'Sweetie.'"

Mrs. Peck is visiting in Washington a few days before returning to Texas. She has been to Montreal, where she represented her State at the international convention of game commissioners.

"I have always been interested in animals and birds," she said. "So I was glad to be appointed game commissioner. I think women can do useful work in this line. For much of my work is in conserving life, and all women are interested in that."

Since her appointment a year ago Mrs. Peck has been studying all available material about game and fish.

"Not only do I study books and reports," she explained, "but I go out to different parts of the State and talk to the people about the hunting situation. I try to find out what they want, and to make the laws that will be most beneficial for every one.

Park Plans.

"We are working with the Federal Game and Fish Commission, and are especially interested in building a duck and geese sanctuary. At Amarillo we are building a huge park, Palo Duro, which we are going to fill with game. We hope to make it one of the show spots of Texas. We are proud of the fact that we use none of the taxpayers' money to support the Game and Fish Commission in our State. All the money comes from licenses and fines. The money is used to keep up the reservations, experimental stations and fish hatcheries. Of course, the commissioners receive no salary."

At present Mrs. Peck is most enthusiastic about the collection of mounted fish, lobster and game she is making for her home town.

"We are hoping this collection will some day be part of a great museum in Amarillo," she said.

The daughter of a Texas rancher, Mrs. Peck has always been interested in civic affairs. The more work she has to do, the happier she is.

"I do club work, and run a cattle business, and work in politics, and still have time to work hard at this new job," she says. "It will last for six years, and I am glad. I just love it."

Man Has to Buy Viol— He Fell Into the Thing

When Ernest Moskowitz, Pittsburg metal manufacturer, returns to his native city it is quite possible he will carry along the bass fiddle he bought in New York.

The fiddle purchase was unintentional. The manufacturer fell into it while he was dancing in a Hungarian restaurant. The head waiter made him pay for it.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: For some time I have thought how sensible and to the point your advice is, and have meant to tell you so; and now the thought has grown by leaps and bounds that probably you can help me, too.

* * * *

I have been terribly lonesome. Then, seeing your answer to "Lonesome" in Tuesday's paper, I was prompted to write immediately. One would think when a woman reaches the age of almost 40 she would have no difficulty in meeting the right sort of men. It seems, though, that each one is either married or very much occupied.

* * * *

I've lived here for three years, so that I have given everything a fair trial—been transferred to a church; been to our State society, hiking club, lodges, as well as other clubs; am keen about sports and thoroughly enjoy concerts. Still, I can not find a congenial companion.

Really, I am not difficult to get on with. Can you help me?

READER.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have read, with so much interest, your kind, well-thought-out answers to questions asked you, of such intimate nature to us, who are comparative strangers to you.

After much thought, I have decided to ask your kindness, also, in answering a problem very near my heart, and I will appreciate your goodness in doing so.

* * * *

I am a widow of 35, considered attractive, have a position that requires an artistic trend, and one in which I am kept pretty busy and happily so. What worries me is that I do not have an opportunity to meet the sort of men who are well educated, interested in sports, golf, bridge and the kind I have always been accustomed to knowing.

Perhaps, through your column, you would be so kind as to suggest some way for a stranger to feel at home in a strange city, without seeming forward or pushing.

* * * *

Thanking you for any advice, I am,

FRIENDLY.

DEAR READER and FRIENDLY: Because your respective letters are so similar in content, I am combining the answers in one.

Certainly your failure to find congenial masculine companionship can not be attributed to lack of opportunity to meet interesting and worthwhile men. Rather, it seems inability to attract those you do meet.

* * * *

And that resolves itself into a matter of personality. Both of you, I suspect, are entirely too self-conscious about your lonely, unattached state. Since both of you are interested in men, why not frankly adjust yourselves to the fact and make it an asset instead of a liability. Two things are to be equally avoided—an attitude of pretended indifference, and an attitude of shrilly, nervous over-eagerness. Another thing the woman past 35 should remember is, don't try to be girlish, nor to compete with younger girls for the attentions of men by using the younger girl's weapons of attractiveness.

* * * *

Be cheerful. Be well groomed and becomingly dressed. A slim figure is an asset, yet plump older women have carried off matrimonial prizes. Be smilingly, intelligently, sympathetically, genuinely interested in all the men who come your way—married or single, engaged or in love with somebody else. Don't bottle up your charms and your feelings, waiting for the appearance of an all-round eligible man before you uncork them.

Cultivate a knack for leading men out, conversationally. A smile that comes from the heart, a straightforward glance that really sees him, lets a man know he exists for you. Talk to men interestedly about their hobbies, their work, their children, their disappointments, their health.

* * * *

The value of cultivating an interest in all men is twofold: you assimilate a lot of valuable information and understanding of masculine nature, and you eliminate the possibility of any one man's jumping to the conclusion your interest in him is unduly personal.

Men seek out women who contribute to their sense of importance, their sense of social and professional success; who inflate their ego. Women accomplish this by lighting up at their approach; by listening attentively to their talk; by appreciating their jokes; by punctuating their narratives of accomplishment with tactfully worded applause. An eminent jurist once corrected a brilliant woman who essayed to tell him those qualities men like in women by saying: "I can tell you in one sentence. Men like women who make them feel they are the whole world."

* * * *

Don't be assertive. Don't be too talkative. Be a good listener. Cultivate friendships with other women. With everyone, practice the art of "listening with your eyes and hearing with your heart," advice given by a famous actress. And if you have reason to believe some one man is interested in you, let him do at least half the work of cultivating a deeper friendship. In listing the secrets of sucecss, an authority once said: "Never go to the person you want to come to you."

More specific advice than this I can not give, unless confronted with more specific data in your respective cases.

M. H.

DEAR LONESOME: Your letter, printed in this column Tuesday, has brought several personal replies. If you will give me your name and address I shall be glad to forward them to you.

PILLAR To POST

MAKING a debut and maintaining one's rating as a class A athlete are not compatible activities, Miss Louisa Ayres Robert fears. The daughter of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, L. W. Robert, is scheduled to make her debut both in Atlanta and Washington this season, and she is afraid the late hours a popular deb must keep (and there is little doubt about the popularity of pretty, dark-eyed Louisa) and the rich foods she must consume will play havoc with her fine condition, even though she refuses to touch cigarettes or cocktails.

* * * *

Her dearest ambition is to make the Olympic Swimming Team which will compete in Berlin in 1936. If the team were being chosen today, undoubtedly Louisa would be on it. But to drop out of training for a season would be hazardous for any swimmer in the pink of condition, and to be feted in the pleasure-loving city of Atlanta and in the giddy whirl that Washington will be this winter is likely to be fatal to her high ambitions. Which only goes to show that for everything one gets in this world a price must be paid.

* * * *

Making the Olympic team was a dream Louisa cherished from childhood. She has spent most of her summers at Sea Island Beach, Brunswick, Ga., where her swimming proficiency was early recognized. An official of the A. A. U. noticed she was particularly apt at backstroking, one of the hardest strokes, and he provided for her exclusive use of the pool at the Atlantic Athletic Club between the hours of 7 and 9 a. m.

* * * *

Every morning during that entire winter she got up early for her swimming practice before going to school. In order that she might not put on fat, from swimimng in the cold water (a way nature has of annoying young ladies), she would apply a thick coating of vaseline to her whole body, so she would not chill.

* * * *

She kept to this strict regimen even during the Christmas holidays, and was rewarded later by winning her first championship in a competition here. Since she was not a resident of Washington, she was not eligible for the medal. But the little girl, the runner-up, Leonora Taube, insisted upon giving it to her. Later Miss Robert won the National championship for juniors in Indianapolis. Her objective was still the Oylmpic team, which she succeeded in achieving in 1932.

* * * *

But she seems fated to be balked at consummating her ambition, for just before the swimming competition in Los Angeles began she was taken ill with appendicitis.

* * * *

Her will to see the finals of the meet caused her to be well enough six days after the operation to leave the hospital for the scene of the Olympics. She saw her own team win, and she also witnessed the breaking of a world record by Eleanor Holm, who excelled, as she did, in the backstroke.

This afternoon Miss Robert will compete in the President's Cup Regatta Invitation meet to be held at the Shoreham. That will be the last time she will enter competition this year, for her duties in preparing for her debut will take all of her time.

Old-Time Political Bombast And Women's Friend, Guile, Necessity for Male Votes

By Malvina Lindsay
(Woman's Page Editor).

MANY good reasons have been given for Miss Josephine Roche's defeat for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Colorado. But one has been overlooked. That is her campaign technique—or rather lack of it.

* * * *

Miss Roche based her campaign on "economic security." What a pedantic mistake! She could at least have revived the 'full dinner pail," or, better still, promised every man, woman and child in Colorado a radio or a metal tire cover.

* * * *

True, Miss Roche was handicapped by being a woman, and by not being a mother or at least a widow. But she might have turned her first encumbrance into an asset. Certain women candidates have. And she might have offset her spinsterhood by adopting an orphanage group for her campaign tours, or by taking along some aged relatives to sit on the platform.

AT ANY rate, she could have proclaimed to the world, especially to her masculine electorate, that she was just a simple, little homebody who had literally torn herself away from the dishpan because she felt her country needed her. She could have worn tricky, little veils, made coquettish gestures, and been overcome with helplessness when lifting a gavel. All three maneuvers failing, she could have set up a model kitchen and publicly baked a pie. (We pass this on as a suggestion to women candidates who have survived the primaries.)

* * * *

There are, of course, many other things that Miss Roche might have done. From what we have heard of her, we doubt very much if when campaigning in rural districts, she stoutly maintained that all country people had superior morals to city people, or when campaigning in towns announced that each town's women were more beautifully gowned, its men more chivalrous, than those of any other urban center.

* * * *

She also probably didn't fervently declare herself in favor of the old-time religion, the old-time politics, the old-time cookery and the old-time girls. And saddest of all, she no doubt failed to end each speech with an apostrophe to motherhood.

IT WAS to have been hoped that feminine politics had advanced beyond the early postsuffrage days when women speakers began with "Ladies and Gentlemen, my grandfather——" and when a woman candidate frequently demanded election to the school board or the county committee on the grounds of having "raised four children and buried three." However, the records of women's candidates of the last 14 years show that sentimentality remains the Siamese twin of practical politics.

* * * *

But what else could have been expected? Men demagogues still flourish and men candidates are still passing around group pictures of their children as 6, 10—or even 17 reasons—why they should make laws or administer them. Spread-eagle oratory may have declined, but on every hand men speakers, especially in their appeal to women audiences, are using every trick of politics. Put a man spellbinder before a woman's mass meeting and inevitably he will wallow in details of his family life, dispense rhetorical complaints to womanhood, come out boldly in support of the home, the school and the church, and with fever-heated words and swelling chest, flay domestic tyrants and repel foreign invaders.

* * * *

So there seems nothing for women in politics to do, so long as they are dealing with men voters, but to fall back on their old ally—guile. As social life is organized today, a woman can no more afford to be gallant and sensible in a political campaign than in an amorous one.

Repeal Brings Brisk Cocktail For the Face

Aperitif Hour Requires Special Pick-Me-Up for the Skin.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THE cocktail hour has started a boom in five o'clock facial preparations. A woman is no longer content to come home from her work and lazy around until dinner. She must spruce up a bit to meet this new demand on her time. She has probably found from experiment that just a quick clean-up wont perk up her skin and iron out the fatigue lines. It takes something more, and this more is supplied by a beautician with a cream and a lotion which do as much for the face as a cocktail does to the spirits.

Both are made from the juice of fresh ripe strawberries, and as a result they have that mellow fragrance of old wine. Once on, they begin immediately to reanimate the skin and give it a fresh, rested look.

At night a thin coating of cream does amazing things to the pores in the way of tightening and closing them. Most pore creams have such a drying effect that women with dry skins are reluctant to use them. But not so with this one. It was prepared with sensitive and dry skins in mind, and is especially adapted to either.

Thank your lucky stars, too, that neither lotion nor cream is prohibitively priced!

Greece Reflected in Sandals.

Grecian styles, always lovely, graceful and becoming, are not only reflected in dresses and robes this season but in bedroom slippers as well.

A downtown store is featuring some, called the Grecian slip-in, because, as their name implies, they are designed on Grecian sandal lines and are easily slipped on and off.

Doubtless you've seen the open-toe, hard-soled sandals, but these have the soft, comfortable soles so many women prefer. They're all leather, and leather lined, in blue, green, black and red; sizes 3½ to 8½. Price, $1.59.

Satin Lingerie.

When the buyer for the lingerie department of a downtown store returned from her buying in New York she brought back all kinds of the loveliest things picked up at special prices. In consequence they will be sold for far less than you'd dream.

Satin gowns for $1.95 are already a hit. These are long and clinging, trimmed in soft, fine lace. They come in a delicate shade of tea rose, always a favorite lingerie color.

Military Brushes.

This is the last day some military sets will sell for $1. There are two genuine ebony brushes with exceptionally fine bristles, and a small, slender comb made to fit a masculine grasp.

Wives who shop for their husbands, or mothers for their sons, will recognize this merchandise as a most unusual buy.

Waxettes for Guests.

Hostesses have more problems than meet the naked eye. Of course, there's the bother of making out a guest list, exclusive and inclusive at the same time; the bother of seating the guests in a congenial fashion, and the bother of a striking table decoration.

But aha, there's one other little bother that can't be overlooked. When the guests settle themselves comfortably for that last round of coffee, out come the cigarettes. Hands reach for the candles in the center of the table. These are tilted over and drops of wax line the snowy tablecloth. The hostess smiles placidly, with turmoil in her heart.

To meet this situation a downtown store suggests the use of waxettes. These are especially prepared little tapers which are to be placed at each guest's place. They serve as a medium between guests and candles and take the place of less decorative matches. Thirty-five cents buys a box of 48.

Toward Eye Beauty.

Eyes have never failed to receive recognition as orbs of expression, but sometimes they fail to receive the individual attention they deserve. And yet the stores are filled with eye cosmetics designed to bring out eye beauty in some wise. Perhaps one of the most interesting eye preparations is "ey-tec," a permanent coloring for eyebrows and lashes.

It is very simple to apply, and once on looks extremely natural. It doesn't wash off, either! A bit of touching up with it every three or four weeks is all that is required to keep the brows and lashes in a permanently tinted color.

Many women have their brows and lashes tinted at beauty salons, but with a bit of this liquid close at hand they can do the job at their own dressing table.

Cosmetics, Away Down.

A $2 value for 69 cents! A lovely gilt box of dusting powder looks as though it were beaten gold. The top is a colorful French print glazed to give a cloisonne effect. Accompanying this is a half-ounce bottle of perfume in gardenia or Parisian fragrance. There was a time when both of these sold for $1 a piece. Now both for less than the price of one!

To Be Pretty and Yet Smart Is Woman's Aim This Autumn

It's All Done With Ruffles and Ripples and Fancy Little Details That Have Been Quiescent for a Long Fashion Era.

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—According to the old saying, "Pretty is as pretty does." If it's true, Fashion must be very pretty for it does such very pretty things in many of the new coats and dresses. And women wearing them look prettier than for many seasons.

That doesn't mean they are pretty in a little girl, fluffy ruffles way. The new prettiness is a very sophisticated matter, combining elegance of line with daintiness of detail.

Ruffles are used, however, as a part of this new fashion for prettiness. You'll find them on eventing dresses, for one thing. But not the fluttery kind. Stiffened ruffles are the thing, and very sophisticated they are, too.

And you'll find them on soft bright colored afternoon dresses, too, such as the one in the illustration. And you'd never call the ruffle on that dress "little girly," would you. It's a very new kind of ruffle, put on in a new sophisticated way.

You'll find slim-fitting, long-lined coats of graceful, elegant silhouette finished off with rippling jabots of fur. And that's a pretty touch.

Many sports coats are prettied up with rippled shawl collars instead of the usual bundly, rougher-looking collar.

Pretty Tailored Dresses.

Tailored dresses, always smart, are made pretty now with dressmaker details and rich trimming, but always retaining their tailored lines.

Trimmings of velvet and taffeta; details of ruffs, rippled revers, soft bows, interesting seamings and buttons—they all add a touch to the tailored dress which gives it a more femnine and less masculine look.

And on soft daytime dresses, draped necklines, yokes and bows of metal or other contrasting fabrics and softly full sleeves all put an extra bit of prettiness into the picture.

Of course not every woman is going to want all her clothes of this sort. Many will still prefer the crispness of a real tailored dress.

But those who do want pretty dresses and coats will also want pretty hats. And can have them, soft-brimmed ones, trimmed up with bird wings, ribbons, decorative rows of stiching and so on.

And wearing all these softer, prettier clothes, they'll feel very much in new fashion.

Dresses of the types described are available in Washington in all the better dress shops and department stores.

What Today Means

"Virgo."

IF SEPTEMBER 20 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 8:30 p. m. until midnight. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 12:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m.

There is every possibility of your finding this a day full of unexpected surprises and one requiring an exceptional amount of mental alertness. It may prove good judgment to regard suspiciously makers of honeyed speeches and flattering remarks. Schemes may be hatched to tempt the unwary, so be careful you do not allow a smooth tongue make you become gullible.

A friend may discuss a matter in which they are sincerely interested and believe in firmly, but is laden with superstition. The belief in omens usually results in mental unhappiness and frequently fanaticism, due to the unconscious worshiping of false gods. You may prove your well balanced reasoning powers by not allowing this friend's enthusiasm to affect your good logical sense.

You may receive an invitation to a social affair of rather an informal nature, where one of the guests, purely through the lack of the proper amount of self assurance, may assume an objectionable attitude of superiority. Just bear in mind that those to "the manor born," never take this attitude, so you can afford to ignore it and not be upset by the type of person that can only be classified as being crude.

Married and engaged couples, as well as those suffering from cupid's darts, may find this an auspicious day on which to plan activities of a festive character.

If a woman and September 20 is your natal day, if you do not already possess a knowledge of the technique of modern writing, it might pay you to study it, as you should be very successful in magazine or journalistic work. You should be happily married and have a home of your own. You should eventually have an abundance of worldly goods, as well as the capacity of spending wisely.

The child born on September 20, generally when it has passed the period of adolescence, develops into a surprisingly strong character, talented and capable.

If a man and September 20 is your birth anniversary, the pen should prove the medium through which you can attain your greatest success. Educational work should also offer excellent opportunities for one possessing your disposition. You are probably an opportunist, which may enable you to succeed where others would fail. Home life should appeal to you and bring you the happiness that a solitary existence might prevent.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

MANY a mother who would prefer to be at home with the family is forced into the business world by economic pressure. If the child she leaves behind her is very young, she is apt to worry about its care in her absence, but by turning the customary infant schedule topsy-turvy she can perform the most important duties herself.

She will want, for instance, to give the baby his daily bath because of the opportunity it offers for looking him over for rashes or other minor ailments. Morning is the traditional time for the bath, but evening, from practical experience, does equally well. It is soothing and afterwards the baby is likely to sleep well, insuring a peaceful night for his mother also. The routine, of course, is what counts in a baby's life; give him his bath every night before the 6:30 or 10:30 feeding, keep him on that schedule regularly, and he'll suffer no harm from it.

Making up the food for a 24-hour period is usually a morning task because it fits into the housekeeper's routine. But it can be done equally well at night, and the mother who does it herself knows that the bottles are thoroughly sterilized and the formula properly followed.

The dual role of business and woman and homemaker is strenuous, but when it is necessary to undertake it the baby need not suffer.

(Saturday: Toys that cost nothing.)

Mrs. Pitts knows from experience the problems that confront the working mother. For advice on this and other problems of child management, write Alice Fox Pitts in care of The Washington Post.

HUNDRED GRAND

By Erle Stanley Gardner

"WHAT the devil are you getting at?" Johnson asked.

"Simply this," Lanlic said. "You know that someone shot Temple. You know that the shot was fired by someone standing in the rear of the car. You can't tell from the position of Temple's body just where the shots were lined up—that is, just where the man stood who fired the shots."

"We don't need to," Johnson said. "We can line up the two bullet holes, one in the back of the car and one in the windshield. They give it to us absolutely."

"I take it," Lanlic said, "that you don't know very much about what happens when a bullet goes through glass."

Somebody snickered, and Johnson flushed.

"I know all I need to know," he said. "I know that these bullets were probably steel jacketed. They were fired with high velocity, smokeless powder back of them. They made a nice, clean hole in the glass, with little radiating cracks. If the car had been a later model, with a shatter-proof windshield, there would have been more radiating cracks instead of a clean hole."

"That's not enough," Lanlic said. "You should know what happens when you fire a bullet through glass. If you did, you'd never have arrested Terry."

Johnson was interested.

"What the devil are you talking about?" he asked.

"Simply this," Lanlic said. "When a bullet goes through a sheet of plate glass it leaves little shell-like pits around the edge of the glass at the point of exit. In other words, by looking at glass you can tell the direction from which the bullet was fired."

Johnson said savagely, "Are you going to try to tell me that the bullets were fired from the front of the car instead of from the rear of the car? If you are, you might explain how it happens that there's no hole in the front of the windshield where the bullet went that smashed into Temple's head."

"No," Lanlic said, "I'm not going to tell you that, but I am going to tell you that when you get the direction of the line of fire by lining up these two bullet holes, the one in the windshield and the one in the back of the car, you're working on a false premise. One of those bullets was traveling in one direction and one in the other. The two holes were made by two different bullets."

Johnson laughed and said, "A sweet coincidence. You can try and sell that theory to a jury."

To Sell Theory.

"I'm going to sell it to you," Lanlic said, grimly, "and I'm going to sell it to you right now. Just because these two bullet holes line up, you jumped at the conclusion that they were made by the same bullet. They weren't. Come here and take a look at the edge of the glass through this lens. You can see those little shell-like pits on the outer edge of the glass. Those were caused by the irregularities of the bullet pushing the glass away as the bullet emerged."

Johnson reluctantly took the magnifying glass from Terry's hand, examined the windshield and the glass in the back of the car.

"I see what you mean," he said, noncommittally.

"Now, then," Lanlic said, "if you'll notice these two bullet holes that line up, you'll notice that on the one on the windshield, the pits are on the outside of the windshield; that is, on the side toward the radiator and the front of the car. Now, if you'll notice the pits on this bullet hole in the back of the car, you'll see that the pits are on the side of the glass that faces the back of the car. In other words, they're on the outside. That means that one shot was fired from the inside of the car through the glass in the back, and the other shot was fired from the inside of the car through the windshield in front."

It Couldn't Be.

"Hell," Johnson said, "it couldn't be that way."

Lanlic shrugged his shoulders and said, "Get a gun and a piece of plate glass. Come over here where I can fire some shots and I'll prove it to you."

The officers of the Homicide Squad followed Lanlic to the end of the runway, where there was a pile of old sacking. Some one produced a broken section of a piece of plate glass, and handed Lanlic a gun.

As the attorney stood back and took aim, he said, "I'm also going to fire the bullet into the glass from a slight angle. You'll notice that the pits at the point of exit vary as to location, depending upon the angle from which the bullet was fired."

Lanlic fired test shots into the plate glass. After each shot he called attention of the officers to the little pits in the glass, to the manner in which the pits varied as the angle of fire was varied. When he had finished, they saw that his contentions were established beyond any question. Whoever fired those shots sat on the inside of the car.

"What does it mean?" Johnson asked.

Theory Explained.

Lanlic shrugged his shoulders and said, "For one thing, it means that the shot that killed Temple came from the outside of the car. You've got no way to check the direction of that shot by lining up the point where the bullet entered Barclay Temple's head with the hole in the glass in the back of the car, because you can't tell just where Temple's head was when the shot was fired. You can, however, tell something of the direction in which the bullet went through the glass by examining the frequency of the pitting on the inner side of the glass. Notice that these pits are far more prominent about the bottom of the hole. The shot was, therefore, fired from a downward angle.

"Now, here's what probably happened: Temple was in that automobile. Someone jumped up on the rear of the automobile and pointed a gun at Temple. Temple fired from the inside of the car. The shot missed the man on the back of the car, but made that hole in the rear of the glass. The man on the back of the car fired through the glass and killed Temple. There were then two holes in the back glass of the automobile—none in the front.

Killer Was Inside.

The man wanted to make it appear someone else had done the shooting and that the shots had been fired from a distance. He only had to line up a spot in the front of the windshield which was in the general line that he wanted. He sat on the inside of the car and fired a shot out through this part of the windshield. Then he drove the car to a certain place and backed it around until he had the line of the two holes pointed directly toward the spot desired. In this instance, it was a mail box. He knew that a person being shot at would instinctively take refuge behind that mail box. The murderer placed the murder gun on the sidewalk, where a man would find it and pick it up. He knew that Terry was going to be at that place and would wait there. When Terry took up his position, the man fired two or three shots in the air. Terry naturally returned his fire. That was all there was to it."

Johnson stared in frowning concentration at the bullet holes.

Roger Terry, his eyes glinting with interest, stared steadily at Carlton Lanlic.

Might Be Possible.

"It might be a good theory," Johnson said.

Lanlic faced him.

"Whether it is or not," he said, "I'm giving you my ultimatum. Roger Terry is my client. I've convinced you that he couldn't have been guilty of the murder. I've convinced you that you're seriously handicapping his work in this kidnaping case by holding him here. I'm demanding that you turn him loose or else face the charge that you're deliberately standing in with the kidnapers by trying to hamstring the efforts of the government men."

Sergt. Johnson gnawed at his grizzled mustache. He looked once more at the holes in the glass of the automobile, then, reaching a sudden decision, turned on his heel.

"Okay," he said, "take him with you. There's no charge against him."

Outside of police headquarters Terry gripped Lanlic by the hand.

"I'm in your debt," he said simply, "and I've got a confession to make."

"As an attorney," said Lanlic, smiling, "I always advise a client never to make a confession."

His Confession.

"My confession," Terry said slowly, "is that I thought you might be mixed up in this snatching. I thought that your friendship for Sylvia Galen might have furnished the inspiration. I thought that you might have been the 'master mind' behind the whole business."

Lanlic's face grew hard as flint. His eyes stared with uncordial appraisal.

"Now?" he asked.

"Now," Terry said, "I'm begging your pardon."

"Would you mind," Lanlic asked, "telling me just why you've become convinced of my innocence? Is it that your judgment is warped by your sense of gratitude?"

Terry laughed uneasily, and said, "I wish you'd get that savage note out of your voice, Lanlic. Really you have a most expressive voice. No, the thing that convinced me of your innocence was your own analysis of what must have happened."

"You followed that then?" Lanlic asked.

"Yes, I think I saw what Johnson failed to see."

"What was that?"

"What you figured must really have happened."

"Which was?"

More Theories.

"Which was that Barclay Temple discovered something. Oxeman in some way learned what this was. Oxeman must have been listening in on the telephone when Temple called me. Temple stole Oxeman's car, but Oxeman managed to climb on the spare tire in the back, or else to get inside of the baggage compartment. He knew that I was to wait at Nineteenth and Central streets for Temple.

"Somewhere along the road, Temple must have realized he was carrying Oxeman in the car. He stopped the car. Perhaps Oxeman made some move. Perhaps Oxeman was the aggressor. We never can tell. Temple must have fired first. That means that Oxeman must have been threatening him.

"What seems plausible is that Oxeman decided to kill Temple. He crawled up on the sloping back of the coupe and leveled his revolver. Temple glimpsed the man in the rear-view mirror. He whipped out his own gun, whirled and fired. He missed. Oxeman fired and did not miss. He knew the story that would be told by those bullet holes, this Oxeman. He was too smart to leave the affair in that shape. He figured the general line that he wanted, marked the place on the windshield where he wanted a bullet to go. He climbed to the inside of the car and put a bullet through the windshield. Then, driving the car from the right-hand seat, he piloted it down to Central street, where he parked it. He dropped the death gun, which he had in the meantime fully loaded, where I would be certain to see it. He waited in one of the dark doorways. When I had taken up my station at the corner, he fired a couple of shots over my head, pointing them so they would go down the street without hitting anything. I returned the fire. In the meantime, He'd probably given the police an anonymous tip that would bring them to Nineteenth and Central.

Ringing in the Ears.

MANY disturbances that have no relation to our general well-being, and that have little or no effect on longevity, are pestiferous and annoying. One such is the symptom known as tinnitus, or ringing in the ears. The sounds, as described by patients, are similar to those produced by the roaring of the ocean, falling of water, chirping of crickets, escaping of steam, or rushing of air.

Most of us are familiar with the inescapable bell-like sound that follows a dose of quinine. Furthermore, in the presence of an acute head cold or of inflammation of the throat, we are sometimes conscious of a roaring that is usually high pitched and that may continue for several days. Head noises from such causes are rarely significant and usually disappear as the infection subsides.

The occasional snapping or cracking noise sometimes heard on swallowing is usually due to a change in air pressure that occurs with the opening and closing of the tube (Eustachian tube) that leads from the throat to the middle ear. Sometimes deafness, resulting from chronic inflammation of this tube, is accompanied by a ringing noise. This is frequently remedied by opening the tube and relieving the congestion. Many cases have been reported in which enlarged tonsils had closed the throat opening of the tube. Removal of tonsils in such instances restored the air conducting function of the tube and the roaring ceased.

Otosclerosis, a disease of the labyrinth of the ear, and one of the prominent causes of progressive deafness, may be accompanied by ringing in the ears. Sometimes acute or chronic conditions, such as influenza, thyroid disease, and high blood pressure, will cause head noises. There seems to be a sufficiently definite relation between high blood pressure and roaring in the ears to warrant rest and diet leading to reduction of the blood pressure.

Head noises sometimes play a part in minor nervous disturbances. The psychological effect of a continuous ringing noise is successfully combated by the development of phlegmatic attitude; that is the individual is sometimes able to acquire a sense of deafness to the particular overtone.

While progress in relieving head noises has not been rapid, some advances have been made. We cannot but be impressed with the delicacy and intricacy of the hearing mechanism and with the importance of giving this valuable organ all possible care. Infection, the "black beast" of many parts of the body, is particularly serious when it attacks the middle ear. Some day—soon, we hope—persistent roaring in the ears will yield to the advancing tide of medical research.

Coiffure Can Subtract Years From Face of Older Woman

A woman's hair is the barometer of her appearance. It gives her style, grooming and beauty, or it detracts from her looks as no other feature can. This is the fourth and last of a series of interviews with local hair dressers who give constructive hair advice.

By Frances Mangum.

THE MIDDLE-AGED woman can scarcely devote too much time and attention to her coiffure. It alone can subtract or add ten years to her age. It can make her ridiculous or give her the mature beauty which is rightfully hers.

Charles of the Shoreham, who has studied hairdressing since he was 15, says he has many clients who are forty-threeish or thereabouts. They come to him with their hair problems. He advises them not to dodge their age but to grace it. In doing this they inevitably look younger than they actually are.

"The mature woman," he says, "should have a coiffure which is sophisticated but conservative at the same time. She should avoid too many curls. And she should wear her hair so that color and style are suited one to the other."

More Old Bobs Than Young.

Mr. Charles spoke of the time, years ago, when bobbed hair was considered too youthful for older women.

"That is not the case any longer," he said. "As a matter of fact one now finds almost more young girls with long hair than middle aged women.

"Frequently the older woman will find that by bobbing her hair she can arrange it far more becomingly. She can wave it loosely around her face so it softens her features, and she can cut in the back so it isn't straggly as some knots are. Besides," he added, "she can wear bobbed hair so that it looks long and particularly well groomed."

Tinting Is an Art.

Mr. Charles believes there is an art to tinting an older woman's hair. "I often like to leave a few gray hairs showing," he said. "In this way the color is not in too great a contrast to a lined face, and the hair looks decidedly natural."

Gray hair, he believes, is very flattering and when it is a solid mass of white should be left untinted.

"The woman with white hair is always striking looking," he said. "Many women seem to realize that now and dress to accentuate the silvery sheen of their coiffures. But," he continued, "white hair must be given especial attention so it will always look soft and snowy. It should be shampooed and treated regularly, regardless of the trouble.

"And," added Mr. Charles, "the results are always full pay for the trouble!"

Capital Kitchen

By Susan Mills.

COLLEGE girls and boys have big appetites and admiration for mothers who are good cooks. Nothing is quite so welcome as the "box from home." It isn't too soon to begin thinking about the contents of those boxes, nor too soon to try out some recipes for them.

Girls frequently get together and make toast or soup or sandwiches. Nothing is tastier than good broiled bacon on whole-wheat bread. Send a box of sliced bacon or a jar of it. It's easy to pack. If practical, send a head of lettuce and bread for the sandwiches. Be sure to include a jar of mayonnaise.

There is nothing simpler than bouillon, with bouillon cubes on hand. Add hot water and, presto, there you are.

Dried beef is another food college girls like. Make a jar of thick white sauce and send it to your daughter along with a jar of dried beef. She can heat the beef and the sauce (thinned with water) in a jiffy and serve it on toast.

Fruit is always good. Apples and pears carry best. Send some pears that are still hard—they will ripen later and not all at one time—or a box of shiny red apples.

Can you make good nut bread? It is wonderful with cream cheese. Send rolls, if you live near enough so they will not arrive hard and stale. They are quite as good as cakegooey cinnamon rolls, cocoanut—or raisin and nut, or just plain rolls for sandwiches.

Confection Cookies.

⅞ cup butter
4 tablespoons powdered sugar
2 cups pastry flour
1 cup nutmeats
2 teaspoons vanilla
1 teaspoon water

Mix and chill until cool enough to mold with fingers. Break, form into date-shaped forms. Bake at 400 degrees to a very light brown. When cool roll in powdered sugar. Recipe makes 60.

The Bobby's "Move On" Is Found Widespread

The injunction of the London "Bobby" to loiterers to "move on," the columnist of the Morning Post of London has sought for and found paraphrased elsewhere as follows: An inverness constable, in dispersing a crowd, was heard to say, "If you will be standing there, you will have to go to be moving on. Don't be creating a mob."

A Crafton street, Dublin, instance was typically Irish, "Now look here, my good man, if ye want to keep standing ye'd better move on."

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)
By Morgan Baker

THE District Federation of Federal Employes will launch its educational program for the winter season on the last Friday of October when the first meeting of the Educational Forum of the NFFE here will be called to order by Dr. J. Franklin Meyer.

BAKER

Dr. Meyer will preside over the Forum during the year, succeeding Ulrey J. Biller, founder of the Forum. Mr. Biller, National vice president of the NFFE, originiated the Forum under the auspices of Local No. 2, some six years ago. Later it became one of the leading programs of the entire NFFE organization here, under the direction of the D. C. Federation.

An expert on retirement, Mr. Biller has decided that he must devote his entire time to preparation of retirement statistics and data in time for the Congressional hearings on retirement legislation, scheduled prior to the convening of Congress in January. He will be sorely missed, but Dr. Meyer is well qualified to conduct the Forum in his absence. Dr. Meyer is president of the Bureau of Standards Union, No. 260, and presided over the last session of the Forum before the summer.

Prominent Federal officials vitally interested in the program of the Federal employes will be asked to speak to an open meeting each month. It is believed a Civil Service commissioner will speak on the "Merit System."

Other phases of the NFFE's locals' winter program are either under way or definitely outlined. Local No. 2 will raise the curtain on the social season with a dance on November 17 at the Mayflower Hotel. Credit unions and hospital guilds sponsored and maintained by NFFE unions are functioning with much success. Latest to report sizable gains in credit union membership are those of the War Department Local, No. 261; Women's Union of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, No. 105; Treasury and Commerce Departments.

AS THE second effort since its organization, the Department of Agriculture Musical and Theatrical Gulid will present three one-act plays tonight in the new department auditorium, as follows:

"Mrs. Sullivan's Social Tea," by Laura Frances Kelley; "The Valiant," by Holworthy Hall, and "The World Agin Her," by Bruce L. Miller.

The cast for Mrs. Sullivan's party includes Viola Randolph, Bureau of Agricultural Economics; Bill Ewing, AAA; Rebecca McKinney, Secretary's office; Helen Hage, Secretary's office; Della Mae Baker, AAA; Elizabeth Knee, Bureau of Agricultural Economics; Doris Menter, Bureau of Dairy Industry; Helen Connolly, Bureau Home Economics; Edith Evers, Bureau Home Economics, and Katherine Swinland, AAA. Rose E. Perkins, Bureau Agricultural Economics, is directing the piece.

The absorbing tale of "The Valiant" is told by Helen Hage, Secretary's office; W. H. Redit, Bureau of Agricultural Economics; H. L. Chamberland, AAA; Stanley M. Amy, AAA; Edward Calkins, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, and George W. Field, Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Mr. Field also is directing the play.

Chamberland, AAA; Bettie Roberts, Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, and Harry Kabat, Secretary's office. Betty Whitfield, Bureau of Animal Industry, Washington tennis star, is directing this bit of rural burlesque.

The guild concert orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Walter Bauer (*), AAA, will play during intermissions. Louise McAllister, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, will be mistress of ceremonies.

Erwin had been punished for Fred's childish misdeeds and vice versa. People used to say they looked enough alike to be twin brothers.

Later the Iske family moved to Detroit and the Nester family moved to Council Bluffs, Iowa. The boys lost track of each other, each almost forgot his boyhood chum. But Then, when they were 26 years old, the truth became known. They were twins brothers.. They were identical twins, adopted when they were babies, one going to the Iske family and the other to the Nesters.

For good digestion

—there is nothing that can take the place of your own gastric, digestive secretions. Frequently, poor digestion is due to lack of tone in the stomach walls—because of low blood strength. S.S.S., the great, scientifically-tested medicine, is specially designed to fill a two-fold purpose in this respect... it aids in stimulating the flow of natural stomach secretions... and by building up deficient red corpuscles, with their hemo-glo-bin, it restores to a more normal functioning the secretions of the stomach digestive juices... so necessary for good digestion. This double value of S.S.S. is important.

By all means try S.S.S. for better health and more happiness. Its benefits are progressive... accumulative... and enduring. Unless your case is exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food and good digestion... sound sleep... and renewed strength. This is why many say "S.S.S. makes you feel like yourself again."

Do not be blinded by the efforts of a few unethical dealers who may suggest substitutes. You have a right to insist that S.S.S. be supplied you on request. Its long years of preference is your guarantee of satisfaction.

Eastern Poloists Stage Sensational Rally to Win From West, 10-8

Guest Stars As 15,000 Watch

West Leads by 8 to 4 as Smith Gets 3 Goals in 6th.

Young Easterners Put in 4 Goals to Tie Score in 7th.

WESTBURY, N. Y., Sept. 19 (AP).—Four young whirlwinds on horseback blasted the defense of the high-geared Western team to bits today and galloped to an astounding triumph for the East in the first match of the intersectional polo championship series. The final score was 10 to 8.

The East's inspired youngsters, none of them long out of college, came from behind in the seventh chukker to wipe out a four-goal deficit within less than four minutes and gain the deciding margin with a six-goal scoring spree that ranks among the most spectacular ever witnessed in major polo competition.

Checks West Rally.

Certainly no match in memory ever involved a more rapid or dazzling switch in fortunes. The West's powerful team, although held to even terms in the first half, had rallied to take the lead and apparently settled the issue with a three-goal spurt in the six period, as the two ten-goal aces, Elmer Boeseke, of California and Cecil Smith, of Texas, played brilliantly to pile up an 8-4 margin. It looked as if the Eastern "kids" had shot their bolt against more experienced and harder-hitting opposition.

It looked that way, that is, to all but Mike Phipps, Jimmy Mills, Winston Guest and Billy Post, who rode out for the "old college try" in the seventh period and promptly unfurled a comeback that had the Westerners on their heels and the crowd of 15,000 spectators at the Meadow Brook Club's international field on their feet yelling wildly. Before the West could seemingly do a thing to check the furious charge of these young cossacks, the score was tied. Still reeling about on horseback, the shattered Western defense yielded two more goals before the period ended.

Phipps Tallies Three.

Mounted appropriately on a 10-year-old Argentine gelding named Hurray, Phipps, playing No. 1 for the East, led the victorious thrust. He tallied three of the East's six goals in the climatic seventh chukker. Each of his teammates also scored in one of the finest exhibitions of team-play and scoring power ever witnessed on Meadow Brook's historic turf. Two fouls called against the West, as they fought hard to stem the tide, proved costly and added to the East's scoring opportunities.

Throughout the period the ball was almost exclusively in the Western half of the field. Phipps missed a good chance to score at the start, but Mills fired the first shot of the comeback charge soon afterward. Phipps tallied on a nice run and then Post ranged through the third goal on a free hit arising from a foul by Boeseke. The long-hitting Guest put through the tying goal after a fierce scrimmage. Another foul, called on Eric Pebley this time, gave the East its chance to score again. Post's free hit was partly blocked, but Phipps poked it through for what proved to be the winning goal. The Eastern forward scored once more before the bell rang and the Westerners wearily changed mounts.

Display Great Defense.

Led by the burly Smith, the Westerners tried hard to rally in the eighth and final period, but the East was not to be deprived of the fruits of its magnificent attack. The youngsters displayed defensive ability equal to their attacking skill and successfully fought off every effort of the West to break through. The margin of victory would have been greater, but Guest's shot through the goal posts was nullified by a foul.

The outcome was one of the biggest upsets polo has known in many years. With a seasoned quarter handicapped at 36 goals, the West figured to have all the edge, not and transform a Mexican lead of 2-1 into an impressive victory for the Stars and Stripes.

U. S. Army Poloists Ride To 11-6 Victory Over Mexico

Thus the Mexican invaders were repulsed in the first of the three-game series by a dashing performance of the American riders performing in the presence of row on row of prominent figures in the Capital's diplomatic, military and civic callings.

Among those freely photographed in the boxes that encircled the spacious West Potomac Park field were Secretary of State, Cordell Hull; the Mexican Ambassador, Don Fernando Gonzales Roa; Secretary of War, George H. Dern, and Chief of Staff, Gen. Douglas McArthur.

The bald-headed Captain Davis, grim and tight-lipped, hardened by years in the saddle, began his sensational scoring spree in the third period as the American ripped the Mexican defense to shreds.

Maker of the lone American goal of the first two periods, Davis, riding at No. 1, stormed through and around the bewildered Mexican invaders to slam the little wooden sphere through the goal posts six more times in the wild rally that ensued.

Laid to Selection Strategy.

Davis' sensational exhibition can be traced largely to the strategy of the American team selection committee, which made the startling move a few days before the match, of shoving the captain, playing No. 2, up to the No. 1 position and selecting young Lieut. Eddie Walker for the No. 2 berth, generally the scoring cog of a polo machine.

The Mexicans were totally unprepared for the combination which greeted them. Their efforts to halt the one-man hurricane forced them to abandon their preconceived attack and broke up their offensive plan completely.

The Americans forced the ball over the Mexican end-line nine times, while the visitors retaliated to this extent on but five occasions. These figures do not, of course, include goals. The Americans advanced over the Mexican line five times in the first half, broken only by two goals in the second period by young Capt. Antonio Nava, the Mexican No. 2, who scored three of his team's points.

Capt. Davis was playing brilliantly before the echo of the opening whistle had died away. Before the crowd was scarcely aware the game had begun he took the ball single-handed nearly the entire length of the field only to miss a goal from 25 yards. He was riding with terrific speed.

Unable to Score.

Maj. C. C. Smith, the American back, whose defensive play was one of the highlights of the conflict, missed scoring after Davis' unsuccessful try as he shot for the goal swinging his mallet under his pony's neck. The Americans had the upper hand distinctly but were unable to score until midway in the chukker, when Davis emerged from a scrimmage near the goal to score.

Not long before the end of the period, play was suspended when a horse stepped on the ball and buried it. Lieut. George H. Read, whose long-distance hitting flashed in sensational fashion, twice resulting in scores, fouled as the second chukker opened, and Capt. Nava made good on the free try from 30 yards.

The ball had hardly been put in play again when Nava charged out of a melee on the sidelines near the Mexican goal, eluded the American defense and scored to put the invaders in the lead. He missed another foul shot a few moments later. The period closed as Davis, Read and Walker took the ball through on a sweeping attack only to go wide of the goal.

With the exception of this last advance, the Mexicans were setting the pace in this period.

Davis once more tore through on a scoring jaunt as the third chukker opened but missed tying the score as his shot from 20 yards went wide by inches. The weather-beaten veteran came back a few moments later, leaned half-way out of his saddle and slammed the willow sphere through the posts to make the score, 2-2.

The players had hardly begun to scrimmage again when Davis broke loose once more but failed to score as his shot hit the post and rolled away. The Mexican horsemanship was superb. They were riding daringly, but their hitting lacked finality and distance.

Lieut. Read, the 190-pound former Western High School boy, took a hand in the scoring at this point by taking the ball 200 yards single-handed and scooping it through the posts in a single shot which sailed fully 30 feet up in the air and 50 yards in length. The goal put the Americans in the lead again. The Mexican teamwork, distressed by the unexpected American attack with the No. 1 Davis bearing the brunt, was faulty.

Rides Like a Madman.

Maj. Smith missed a foul shot by a few feet as the fourth period began. Perex hit it in from the side, and from the following scramble the grizzled Davis emerged full tilt, dribbling the ball to a scoring position and slamming it through for a 4-to-2 lead. He was riding like a madman, hitting from any position.

The only spill of the game came at this point when Lieut. Reed's pony slipped in a moist spot and the officer was unseated. Nava and Gracia were letting out on their strokes now, but the latter missed a goal on a gambling long shot of tremendous distance.

Read then worked the ball out of scrimmage, passing to Davis, who was loose downfield, and the captain scored easily again to make the count 5 to 2 as the half ended

Nats, Behind Burke, Rout Tribe, 5-2

Climb Pearson for 13 Hits as Southpaw Wins His 8th.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 19 (Spl.).—Two big innings were all the Senators needed this afternoon as they evened the current series with the Tribe at two games each. The score was 5-2. Bob Burke, the solemn southpaw, checked the Redskins with eight scattered hits and chalked up his eighth victory of the season for the fallen champions.

Washington pounded Monte Pearson for 13 bingles, scored two runs in the first and clinched the game in the fifth with a three-run rally that had Pearson wobbly and almost sent down for the count. The Cleveland hurler limited the visitors to three hits after the fifth, but his mates failed to disturb Burke's poise to any great extent, so it mattered little.

Nats Start Barrage.

Pearson passed Bluege to open the first and pitched successive singles to Stone, Myer and Manush. Bluege and Stone scoring. Myer made an effort to get home on Manush's blow to right, but died at the plate on Winegartner's throw to Brenzel.

Cleveland got one of these back in its half of the frame as Vosmik bounced a double off the center field bleachers, sending Trosky, who walked, over the pan. The Tribe's second run was the result of another Vosmik double following a two-bagger by Earl Averill. Vosmik spoiled a potential rally by oversliding second and was erased from the picture on Sewell's peg to Bluege.

Stone Starts Blast.

Stone's single was the opening blast of the National's fifth inning uprising. Myer walked and Manush doubled off the right field wall, Stone scoring, Myer stopping at third. Myer held third as Knickerbocker tossed out Susko, but he and Manush jogged home as Luke Sewell pumped a double down the right field line.

The Tribe threatened in the ninth, Winegarner and Brenzel getting on base with singles, but Burke unwrapped a few more inches of southpawing and waved the rest of the runners down with a strike-out and two-pop-flies.

Daughter Downs Mother In West Coast Golf

Berkeley, Calif., Sept. 19 (AP).—A golfing rivalry betwen daughter and mother was decided in favor of the daughter today when Miss Marion Leachman, of Berkeley, defeated Mrs. R. S. Leachman, 5 and 4, in the quarter-finals of the northern California women's championship.

It was the third time the two have met in important Bay Region tournaments. Miss Leachman has won twice.

Yacht Race Delayed by Calm Sea

Endeavour and Rainbow Becalmed at Starting Line.

Both Reported Ready for Third Event at 10:40 A. M. Today.

By Edward J. Neil.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 19 (AP).—Not a breath of air flicked the rolling seas off America's yacht-racing capital today, so there was no fourth engagement of Britain's blue bolt Endeavour and the America's Cup defender Rainbow.

In the window of a Fifth avenue store in New York the ancient cup that cost some hundred guineas over 83 years ago and millions of dollars' worth of racing sloops since must have steadied on its trembling base as the day passed without adding to the tremendous advantage the Englishman already enjoys—two clear-cut and convincing victories in two official starts.

The first match last Saturday failed to bring a verdict within 5½ hours' time limit.

Make Brave Effort.

They went bravely out today at the usual time to the battle ground, the open ocean 9 miles southwest of Brenton Lightship. With the great fleet of pleasure craft, hundreds of them from ocean liners down to dingy sailers and put-puts trailing in their wake.

Out of the southwest came a few faint puffs of wind, wrinkling the oily tops of the slow, shiny swells. Then even that died, and at 10:20 a. m. there broke out from the committee boat Wilhelmina, in the heart of the tremendous fleet, the red and white pennant that signals starting delay.

The fleet lay there, rolling idly in the swells, smoke rising straight up from the stacks of the big boats, the sails of the little fellows flapping helplessly in an occasional breath.

Salts Shake Heads.

The big blue-hulled Englishman ran up a mainsail and staysail and lolled about, barely under headway. Rainbow, like a huge white gull resting on the waters, drifted near by. The salts aboard the fleet peered intently into the dull, hazy skies and shook their heads.

Thomas Octave Murdoch Sopwith drifted the challenger over by Rainbow and stood by the wheel mourning the situation with Harold S. Vanderbilt, skipper of the harassed defender.

Far more than Sopwith, certainly, would Vanderbilt have liked to break up the staid decorum of international racing and set all hands frantically whistling for a breeze, just a little breeze, for this would be typical Rainbow weather.

Prayer for Light Air.

Beaten twice yesterday in the new cup record time of 3:09:01 over the 30-mile triangular course, in nothing but a fresh sailing breeze, the American's prayer is for light airs. In Saturday's drifting match, Rainbow was a half mile ahead, two miles short of the finish, when time gave out. She is definitely faster at that game, and as definitely slower than the invader when the breeze is brisk.

But no breeze came and for three hours the fleet lay there, until at 12:20 the Wilhemina whistled and signalled that there would be no race today. It was believed that the entire period of delay under the cup rules was used up rather than postpone earlier when the obviousness of the situation was apparent to all, because President Roosevelt sat nearby on the deck of the Astor yacht Nourmahal, hoping for a final glimpse of the races. He had to leave anyway later in the day, sailing for Poughkeepsie on the Nourmahal. The President, a staunch yachtsman, departed reluctantly. He has been here since the first starting gun.

Weather Sharks Dubious.

The weather sharks still were shaking their heads tonight over the possibility of further postponements due to lack of wind. For such things run in cycles in these waters. By various processes of divination, the men who know about wind, including the chart makers, declared there was no real air east of Omaha.

The record for postponements in America's Cup races goes far back to 1890 when the Columbia and the Shamrock I led the fleet out to the course of Sandy Hook lightship 13 times before completing three races. There was one postponement, because of fog that kept all ships in the harbor here, four years ago when Enterprise beat Shamrock V four straight.

Wagers Favor Sopwith.

The betting was 2 to 1 here and as high as 3 to 1 elsewhere that Sopwith will sail his fleet challenger to the two more victories he needs for the first lifting of the cup since the schooner America won it from a British fleet off the Isle of Wight in 1851. There was, however, a definite possibility that a succession of light airs would put Vanderbilt right back in the running. The situation is not quite so bad as when Resolute pulled out successfully in 1920 by winning three straight races from Shamrock III, after losing the first two of a five-race series on flukes.

Vanderbilt came ashore from his yacht Vara late in the day, and there was no tinkering with the defender in a final effort to add to her speed. He said both boats would race at the usual 10:40 a. m. time tomorrow and that he would not ask for a postponement, his right under the rules.

Giants Defeat Reds, 6 to 3; Boost Lead

Champs Rally in 8th to Break Tie; Richmond Knocked Out.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19 (AP).—With one big inning the New York Giants tacked another half game onto their National League lead today, defeating the Cincinnati Reds, 6 to 3, to increase their advantage over the second-place Cardinals to four full games. The Cards were rained out at Boston.

Going into the last half of the eighth with the score tied at 2-all, the Giants put together four hits, a base on balls and an error to score four runs. Before they subdued the Reds in the ninth, however, Manager Bill Terry was forced to call Adolfo Luque from the bull pen to put down a threatening rally.

Berly Richmond, the Reds' recent southpaw acquisition from Baltimore, kept the Giants' hits well scattered until he blew up in the eighth. He was matched by Leroy Parmelee, however, until the Giants' big right-hander was taken out for a pinch hitter in the seventh. Joe Bowman, Al Smith and Luque finished up the game, with Bowman getting credit for the victory.

Errors Aid Reds.

The Giants scored their first run in the second on a pass to Johnny Verges and singles by Blondy Ryan and Joe Moore to tie the score after Sparky Adams had tallied the first Cincinnati run on two errors by Vergez and a pair of infield outs.

The Reds went ahead in the fifth on Adams' single, Slade's sacrifice and Koenig's hit, but the world champions came back again to knot the count in the sixth on singles by Ott, Vergez and Ryan. After the Giants had counted four times in the eighth, the Reds rallied and loaded the bases in the ninth, but were stopped by Luquie afterf scoring one run.

Browns Nose Out Boston Sox, 3 to 2

St. Louis, Sept. 19 (AP).—The Browns scored three runs in one inning today, and defeated the Boston Red Sox, 3 to 2.

Johnny Welch, a home town boy, was the victim of a St. Louis sixth-inning attack which saw all the Brownies' tallies counted. Lefty Grove then relieved Welch and gave but one hit and no runs in two innings.

Today's victory was rather futile, as Philadelphia took a double-header from the Chicago White Sox and pushed the Browns down into sixth place.

Boston played without the aid of Rick Ferrell, their catcher, who, with his brother Wes, Red Sox pitcher, was suspended for yesterday's run-in with Umpire Louis Kolls.

Detroit Held As Murphy Pitches

Auker Is Victim of Uprising for 3 Runs in 6th Inning.

Attendance Is 26,000; Greenberg Is Given the Day Off.

DETROIT, Sept. 19 (AP).—After being held scoreless by Detroit pitchers for 20 consecutive innings, the New York Yankees turned on Elden Auker today and broke the spell when they scored a run in the third inning to make a start that developed into a 5-to-2 victory.

The defeat reduced the Tigers' lead over the second-place Yankees to six and one-half games, but Mickey Cochrane's men still needed only four victories (or three, if they beat the Yanks in the final game of the series tomorrow) to clinch their first pennant since 1909.

For five innings it looked as if Auker might whip the Yanks, but in the sixth he was found for a single, two doubles and walked two batsmen. The result was three runs and virtually sewed up the game as Fordham Johnny Murphy, on the mound for New York, hurled steady ball most of the way.

Murphy Wins Fourteenth.

Murphy held the Bengals to six hits to score his fourteenth victory of the year and grew better after given a lead. He allowed no hits in the last three innings, retiring nine hitters consecutively.

The Detroit infield was broken up for the first time this year when Hank Greenberg, slugging first baseman from the Bronx, was given the day off to observe the Jewish holiday, Yom Kippur. Doljack played first and Goose Goslin moved into the clean-up position.

With the score tied at 1-all, the Yankees loaded the bases in the sixth on Rolfe's single, a double by Selkirk and a free ticket handed Gehrig purposely. Tony Lazzeri crashed through with a double, however, scoring two runs. Chapman then drew a walk and Byrd lifted a long fly to Goslin, sending Gehrig home with the third tally.

The attendance slumped to 26,000, the smallest of the series, and for the first time ground rules were not in force.

Jack Tidball, former National intercollegiate champion from the University of California at Los Angeles, was disposed of by George Lott, world doubles champion, with Stoefen, by scores of 6—3, 6—1.

Frank Shields, America's ranking player, ran into the most difficulty of the seeded stars before he defeated Charles Carr, University of Southern California player, 7—5, 7—5.

Jockey Gilbert Rides Four Winners Out of Seven Mounts at Havre de Grace

Yorktown to Chatmoss In Upset

Syrian Rider Now Has Eight Victories for Meeting.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Sept. 19 (AP). — Johnny Gilbert, smart Syrian jockey who is the particular saddle star of the meeting, jammed Mrs. T. E. Proctor's Chatmoss through dangerously close quarters to snatch a surprise victory in the featured Yorktown Handicap, of 1 mile 70 yards, here this afternoon.

It was Gilbert's third victory of the day. Later he raised his total for the meet to eight by riding four out of seven mounts.

A. G. Vanderbilt's Dogmata was second and Mrs. Deering Howe's Only One third in the field of six. Chicstraw, the odds-on-favorite, was a laboring fourth, Chatmoss paid $14.20.

Gilbert took back with Chatmoss after the break, steadying him along fourth position while Chicstraw and Only One fought a killing pace duel for seven furlongs. Dogmata challenged rounding the lower turn and drew up on even terms with the leaders entering the front straightaway.

Chicstraw Wilts.

Chicstraw, conceding ten or more pounds to his opponents, faltered at the final furlong pole. The race appeared to be between Dogmata and Only One a sixteenth out, but Gilbert whirled Chatmoss up under a rattling handride and got his mount in front in the closing strides, winning by a half-length.

The winner was purchased this morning by Mrs. Proctor from John R. Buchanan. The time for the mile and 70 yards was 1:42 3-5.

George D. Widener's Jack Low, full brother to the famous miler, Jack High, who bore the Philadelphia sportsman's colors in other years, finally graduated from maiden ranks when he defeated 12 other 3-year-olds of this class, in the 6-furlong opener. The winner paid $12.40. Sandy Belle was second, a length and a half back of the winner and a head in advance of Plain Ace, a field horse which saved the show spoils.

Rustic Cuba, a Maryland graduate of the half milers, survived a blanket three-horse finish by a head in the 6 furlongs second number. Grace Bunting was second and Stylish Mack a neck back in the third position. The latter finished fastest of all but was in close quarters at the end. Rustic Cuba paid $11.10.

Gilbert Claims Foul.

Mantados, racing under the popular colors of young Alfred W. Gwynne Vanderbilt, outgamed E. K. Bryson's Gunwale to win the third race, a 5½-furlong test for Maryland-bred juveniles. He was the first favorite to get home safely, paying $4.20. Adams Eve was a distant third after a rough trip. Gilbert, on Gunwale, lodged a claim of foul against the winner, but it was disallowed. Gilbert claimed that Mantados interferred with his mount just after the start.

Jockey Leo Fallon, who rode the Vanderbilt horse, was suspended for the remainder of the meeting.

J. P. Jones' Communist, an odds-on choice paying $3.70, was fully extended to snatch a head decision over Indian News, a field horse, in the fourth race, of six furlongs. Sea Finn, a prominent factor in the early running, was a wilting third. Communist, after breaking sluggishly, was forced to take the long way around on the outside and was under vigorous urging from barrier to finish.

Coming from behind under the whip, My Boss, paying $15.90, scored a half-length victory over Primute in the mile and a sixteenth sixth number. The third award in the field of five went to Easiest Way. Gilbert, riding Gallic, finished last in this event.

Gilbert regained the van in the drive for the Edward Burke $500 gold watch, which goes to the leading jockey of the meeting, when he raised his total to eight with four winners out of seven mounts today. Bobby Merritt, who was on top yesterday, failed to ride a winner.

Gilbert's fourth score was on Manager Bill, paying $9.50, which won the mile and a sixteenth finale. Resurrection was second and Prince Abbot third.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JACK LOW, $12.40, $5.50, $4.60; SANDY BELLE, $12.00, $9.00; PLAIN ACE, $5.00.

JACK LOW, rushed stoutly to hold a forward position, took command leaving the backstretch and under stiff pressure drew out slowly during the final drive. SANDY BELLE, stoutly ridden from the beginning, held on well. PLAIN ACE, blocked at turn out of backstretch while on inside, went around his company and finished with a bold rush. ADVOCATE JUNIOR continued determinedly, but was not good enough.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:55. Off at 3:01. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RUSTIC CUBA, $11.10, $5.20, $3.60; GRACE BUNTING, $24.40, $15.00; *STYLISH MACK, $8.50.

RUSTIC CUBA, working her way up on the outside, challenged stoutly after reaching the homestretch, came with good courage approaching the finish and was up in the last strides. GRACE BUNTING rushed hard to enter a forward position, went to the front with a rush at the stretch turn and moved clear, but weakened. STYLISH MACK, slow to get going, secured racing room along the inside in the last sixteenth and finished gamely.

THIRD RACE—Five and a half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds foaled in Maryland. Start, good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:30. Off at 3:31½. Winner, A. G. Vanderbilt's br. c. (2), by Rockman—Iristados. Trained by J. H. Stotler. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:07 1-5.

MANTADOS, close up with the early leaders and on the outside, moved into command at the stretch turn and, holding on stoutly thereafter, had enough left to stall off GUNWALE. Latter, shuffled back when interfered with in back stretch, sustained fast bid for clear. HAPPY TOM showed keen speed, but was not good enough.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:05. Off at 4.09. Winner, J. P. Jones' b. g (2), by Prince Pal—Anne. Trainer, owner. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:13 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COMMUNIST, $3.70, $3.40, $2.90; *INDIAN NEWS, $7.60, $3.90; SEA FINN, $6.80.

COMMUNIST weaved his way out of tight quarters during the opening furlong, swung to outside of leaders at the stretch turn and, coming willingly under severe urging, was up in the last few strides. INDIAN NEWS, hurried hard to hold a forward position, wore COLORIST and SEA FINN down to take a brief lead, but then weakened. SEA FINN, keen factor form the beginning, was bumped midway of the home stretch by INDIAN NEWS.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. The Yorktown Handicap. A handicap for 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post 4:42. Off at 4:47½. Winner, Mrs. T. Two-dollar mutuel paid—CHATMOSS, $14.20, $8.00, $4.70; DOGMATA, $10.70, $5.70; ONLY ONE, $3.20.

CHATMOSS moved up resolutely at final turn, found passage between DOGMATA and ONLY ONE when straightened into homestretch, then closed gamely to get up inside the final sixteenth. DOGMATA gained a brief advantage at midstretch, but was unable to resist the winner. ONLY ONE had a lot taken out of him racing CHICKSTRAW into defeat. CHICKSTRAW was rushed hard for entire trip then began to falter. FLAMING MAMIE finished strong. CHANCE FLIGHT had no excuses.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800 (claiming prices, $1,500 to $2,000). For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:20. Off at 5:20½. MY BOSS responded gamely when placed to punishment and came strongly to wear down inside the closing furlong. PRIMUTE kept closer up than usual in early stages raced GALLIC into submission but was unable to withstand the winner. EASIEST WAY closed fast. ONCE CHANCE finished with a belated rush. GALLIC, rated in front, stopped suddenly in last quarter mile.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upwards. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Winner, N. B. Stewart's ch. c. (3), by Fair Gain—Foriorn. Trained by H. G. Bedwell.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MANAGER BILL, $9.50, $3.90, $3.10; PRINCE ABBOT, $3.70, $3.50; SUNNY TOM, $4.90.

MANAGER BILL, taken under steadying restraint while holding a position on the inside of leaders for 6 furlongs, went around RESURRECTION when entering homestretch, and under stout handling maintained a brief lead to the end. Heurich Brewers to Meet Printers in Crucial Post Association Game Today

Victory Mean Chance in Finals

Contest Half of Twin Bill With G. P. O. Federals Playing Grace A. C.

Valets, Miller Furniture Clash Sunday for Section B Title.

THE winner of today's Heurich Brewers-Government Printing Office game at Griffith Stadium will emerge the favorite to capture the first annual Post Association interleague week-day championship. These teams alone, in a field of seven pennant-winning clubs, remain unbeaten and today's victory will advance to the final round to await the deciding game with the ultimate survivor among the losing teams.

The Heurich-G. P. O. fray is the feature of a series twin bill, which also brings the Grace A. C. and G. P. O. Federals in an elimination battle on the south Ellipse. Play in both games will be called at 4 o'clock. Kann's, Department Store champs, face the Acacia Insurance team tomorrow at the ball park in another struggle for survival in series competition.

Archie Scrivner, the diminutive southpaw, ranked as the outstanding local sandlot pitcher, will be on the mound for the Brewers, while Frank Corkins is expected to be Manager Shomo's choice in the Printers' bid for title.

The followers of the Grace A. C., which ran away with the Georgetown Church League title, are depending on the right arm of Vernon O'Meara in the Churchmen's game this afternoon with the Federals. Poor pitching proved the downfall of the Federals in their opening appearance against College Park. Richard Lee, victim of his own wildness in the first series tilt, will probably be the selection of Manager Phil Sykes.

Thwarted by rain last week, Manassas and Middleburg, section pennant winners of the Northern Virginia League, will clash Sunday at Manassas in the opener of a three-game series for The Post Association championship in this league.

Last Sunday's schedule of three games will be carried over and constitute the Sabbath's National City League program. In the feature, Blue Flame Valet and Miller Furniture meet on the East Ellipse to decide the winner of Section B title. The winner in this contest will face Pig 'n' Whistle, the other sectional finalist, for The Post Association championship in this league.

Clarendon faces Washington Maid on the West Ellipse in a game which will settle the second half race in the Junior Division, and Simpson's Pharmacy engages Versis at 1 o'clock on the East Ellipse in the opener of a three-game series for the Midget League championship.

Sington Flirts With Football

Nat Player Signs Pact to Play on Grid; Griffith Opposes.

TO play or not to play professional football—that is the question for slugging Freddy Sington, and if President Clark Griffith, of the Nats, has his say, the former University of Alabama All-American tackle, will let the little pigskins squeal their merry way alone.

It seems that Sington, who cut quite a swath in the pennant path of the Albany Senators this year with his well-above .300 average, was offered—and signed—a contract to play with the Brooklyn Dodger pros this fall.

Suffers Memory Lapse.

But young Sington, although fluent with his John Hancock insofar as signing the contract was concerned, apparently suffered a lapse of memory. He is under contract—for a complete year—to Griffith and must obey the mandates of his owner.

For the last month or six weeks Griffith has been buying and signing young players upon whom he bases much of his hopes for next season. Sington plays a prominent part in these hopes, and any injury to him would be disastrous.

It will be recalled that shortly before Griffith made Bucky Harris manager of the Nats in 1923 he forced Harris to give up basket ball, fearing an injury.

Against League Rules.

Griffith last night told The Post that he had not been advised of Sington's football activities, but that it was strictly against major league rules for a ball player to play football. He said that if Sington had signed a contract it was against his (Griffith's) wishes, and indicated that he would act to prevent Sington from participating in the grid sport.

Sington, meanwhile, will report to the Nats today in Cleveland along with Outfielder Jake Powell, former Washingtonian.

Baltimore Club Beats Police Nine, 5-1

Alexandria Hurler Driven From Hill; Post, Police to Resume Series.

ALEANDRIA, Va., Sept. 19 (Spl.).—Baltimore made a successful invasion here this afternoon, trimming the local Policemen, 5 to 1. Lefty Scrivner worked five innings for the Alexandria nine, but retired in the fifth, and Doc Driefus finished the game. Driefus was solved for four hits and three runs. Errors caused the three runs made off Driefus in the ninth.

Woody Godfrey led the Alexandria Coppers with the bat, clubbing the ball for two hits in four tries. He also starred afield. Swayer and Clenanic led the Baltimore hitters, each connecting for a two-base hit and a pair of singles. Henn Sherry, former Middle Atlantic pitcher, played third base for the visitors.

The managers of the two nines will settle the date for the next game tonight.

The Kidwell-coached Celtics are to report for a drill at Baggetts tomorrow afternoon. Sunday they invade Fredericksburg for a doubleheader, the first game starting at 1:30.

Episcopal High School will scrimmage Washington and Lee at the Hill Top Gridiron Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The following are prospective regulars at present: Center, Rogerson; guards, Worthington and Burke; tackles, Welford and Oper; ends, Brown and Gravitt. The back field will be made up of Wilson, quarter; Hixton, full, and Duvall and Tucker, halves. The entire squad of 45 men will probably see action in Friday's scrimmage.

Rogerson and Duvall are Washington boys and Burke makes his home in Alexandria.

Welterweights To Fill Card at Hunt Club

Jay Macedon, Bob Wilson to Feature 'All' Program Monday Night.

TAKING a page from the big fight centers, where "all" cards are the order of the day, the Riding and Hunt Club will burst forth Monday night with an all-welterweight program of punch, headed by a ten-rounder between Jay Macedon and Bob Wilson.

Wilson, the pink-thatched Floridian, has zoomed across the local fistic horizon by stopping Otto Kushmer, Pete Bevans, Cary Wright, Stanislaus Loayza and Roy Manley. Macedon, a Newark noggin-knocker who shoves leather under the guidance of Max Waxman, has scored 42 knockouts in 62 fights. Notable among his kayo victories is one over Ruby Goldstein in 1931, which wrote finis to the career of the great Jewish lightweight.

Terry to Meet Gomer.

Lou Terry, a newcomer from St. Louis, will meet Charlie Gomer, of Baltimore, in a semifinal scheduled for eight rounds. Terry, one of the roughest, toughest punchers in the ring today, never has been knocked off his feet and boasts a decisive win over Chino Alvarez and a close loss to Harry Dublinsky, who recently soundly trounced Tony Canzoneri. Gomer's chief claim to fame lies in a quick knockout scored over Joey Zodda.

Cowboy Frankie Hughes, the venerable punch pusher from Indianapolis, will face Sid Silas, of New York, in another eight-rounder. Hughes has defeated Eddie (Kid) Wolfe, Johnny Lucas and Rufus Miles, among others. Silas won easily from Jimmy Reed, and recently acquired a draw with Joe Rossi, who boasts a draw with Bep Van Klavern.

A four-round opener, which also will find welterweights making passes at each other, is in the making.

Melinkovich Shifted By Notre Dame Coach

South Bend, Ind., Sept. 19 (AP).—George Melinkovich, full back star on the 1932 team, today was shifted to right half back by Coach Elmer Layden, of Notre Dame, to fill the gap left by the death of Johnny "Tex" Young. It was the second shift for "Mink," as he played left half back on the freshman team in 1930 and then full back for 1931 and 1932.

Melinkovich, ill last year, appeared to be in excellent condition today. He has taken off 10 pounds since reporting for football a week ago.

President's Cup Races Await Starter's Gun

Speedy Boats Seek to Wrest Laurels From El Lagarto on Potomac Course.

HOT on the heels of George Reis' El Lagarto, defending champion and perennial Gold Cup winner, a bevy of the world's fastest power boats will tomorrow scamper through the first heat of the President's Cup race, which will feature the speedboat activities of this year's President's Cup Regatta.

While Reis' craft, which won the President's race in 1931 and made a clean sweep in 1933 by conquering all she surveyed in the National Sweepstakes, Gold Cup Race and President's Cup Race, is functioning perfectly so far this year—as attested by its easy victory in the latest Gold Cup Race—the competition promises to wax fast and furious from many sources.

Delphine Outstanding.

Bill Horn's Delphine IV, which won the 1932 President's Cup competition when owned by Delphine Dodge Baker, is outstanding among the contenders for El Lagarto's laurels. Horn was well in the running last year when Delphine IV displayed one of the little vagaries that make speedboat racing so interesting by suddenly losing her rudder and piling into an anchored transport. Since purchasing the boat from Horace Dodge, whose entry it was last year, Horn is understood to have done much to increase its speed.

Edmund Guggenheim's Miss Saranac, which is the revamped El Lagartito, sister ship to the Reis entry, has been displaying much in the way of winning speed in workouts. The El Lagartito was built with the idea of surpassing even the speed of the El Lagarto, but until the boat came into the possession of Guggenheim, it failed to live up to expectations.

Hornet Also Seeks Cup.

The Hornet, Aaron DeRoy's entry, is a familiar figure under a new name. It is the hull of last year's Ethyl-Ruth, powered by a new motor which may drive it to within hailing distance of the $8,000 President's Cup.

The Arctic Tern, which has not yet shown winning form in competition, is reported flashing great speed in practice runs, and many close observers of the game are predicting it will spring an upset over the more favored entries.

John Rutherford's Louisa and Jack Dunn's brand-new Jay Dee will complete the entry list. Neither of these boats has been displaying the speed needed to win a President's Cup race so far this year.

A public-address system along Hains Point will keep the shore spectators advised of the progress of the competition as last year. A new innovation will be introduced with loudspeakers on the stern and aft of the official Apache to keep those aboard craft in the Potomac informed of the progress of the racing.

The waterfront will be decorated as never before for this year's regatta, with hundreds of brilliantly colored pennants to be strung along the water's edge.

Good Material On Hand at King

Bristol School Ready for Opening Game Saturday.

Bristol, Va., Sept. 19 (Spl.).—With the King-Emory and Henry football classic but three days off, the problem of selecting a fullback and quarterback for the starting King College lineup remains a puzzle to Commander Bill Richardson, coach.

The problem is not one of obtaining good men, but of selecting the best from among several good men for each of the two positions. Con Davis, last season halfback, has been converted into a quarterback. Wiley Fleenor and Tige Harris are also quarterback timber. Barnes, Goforth, Formwalt and Pat Meaney are the leading candidates for fullback.

The remaining tentative lineup will be Wilson, center; Waskell and Felty, guards; Butcher and Mazza, tackles; Miller and Fogarty, ends; Harold and Caldwell, halfbacks.

Cards and Terps Tussle Hard In Bitter Practice Scrimmage

Catholic U. Claims Victory; Maryland Reported Defensively Weak.

CATHOLIC U. made it two in a row over Maryland if practice scrimmages mean anything, in a wild and bitterly contested episode of football yesterday at College Park. The Terps scored one touchdown and the Cards matched it, doubled it, tripled it, quadrupled it, and at last reports the scoreboard was in danger of collapsing on the C. U. side. C. U. took everything, but Maryland's name.

The beginning was slow and resembled a pep meeting or haphazardly conducted debate more than a football scrimmage. It was, "Come on Joe, get in there, boy. Lets 'em have it King Kong. Slap 'em down Bill. Get that guy Ed. Ball,—Ball fall on it, fall on it. Come on you guys, get in there." Then the anvil chorus of "Hit 'em, grab 'em, tackle 'em, smear 'em."

Runs for 80 Yards.

For a while Catholic stood around and waited for George to do it and Maryland waited for Joe to handle the situation. Then Dick Nelson flipped an innocent pass to Norwood Sothoron. Nelson chucked the ball, surrounded by half the population of Brookland, and Sothoron caught it, hemmed in by the other half. He got it over near the sidelines, stepped gingerly to the right, to the left, stiff-armed the C. U. secondary defense and Assistant Coach George Vik, and romped 80 yards for a touchdown.

Catholic, with Bob Makofske, its sophomore full back; Babe Gearty and Jeff Jefferson carrying the oval, plowed and squirmed through the Terp line for the first touchdown. After that it was a walk—a slow but certain walk to the goal line. Makofske intercepted one of Nelson's passes to start the Cardinal touchdown march.

Maryland looked bad defensively, or it might have been C. U.'s improved offense, but the Terps have some consolation in the work of Sothoron, "King Kong" Keller, Widmyer and Sachs, all backs; Willis, Birkland and Simpson, linemen. Keller, though he has never played the game before, is making huge strides at end. He figured in 99 44-100 per cent of the plays, bringing down Catholic ball carriers with spin-tingling tackles, and looked particularly good getting down under punts.

Women Golf Stars Anticipate Midatlantic Play Next Month

Mrs. Jones Will Defend Title Against Strong Field.

WOMEN golfers in Washington, Virginia and Baltimore will be interested in announcements sent out yesterday regarding the Middle Atlantic championship scheduled October 8-12, inclusive, at Washington Golf and Country Club's course.

Entries, accompanied by entrance fee of $3, will close October 5, and should be filed with Walter R. McCallum, association secretary, at the Washington Golf and Country Club. The course will be available for practice rounds October 4-5.

In addition to the championship flight of 16, there will be at least four other flights, with prizes to be awarded the winners and runner-up in each flight, and winners in the consolation eights.

Mrs. Jean Jones, of Richmond, who defeated young Lily Harper, of Portsmouth, in last year's finals in Richmond, will head a delegation of prominent Virginia golfers. Baltimore also will be ably represented, with Mrs. Boyd Morrow and Mrs. Jerome Sloman as the chief challengers. The District stars, notably Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley, Mrs. Jack Scott, Virginia Pope, Mrs. David Clark, Winnie Faunce, District champion, and Helen Dettweiler, Maryland titleholder, will attempt to bring the crown back to the Nation's Capital after the lapse of a year.

Al Houghton, Kenwood pro, yesterday demonstrated to several of his professional friends that he is hitting the ball 50 yards farther off the tee. Houghton's former driver had an exceedingly stiff shaft and he was not getting distance. He found the answer in a more whippy shaft, and yesterday pounded out a 68, with a 32 on the outgoing nine. Russ Hollebaugh and Leo Walper, with 74 each, and Reds Cunningham and Al Treder, with 75 each, watched Houghton lick Old Man Par by 3 shots. He had 4 birdies. His card:

Out.. 4 4 3 3 5 2 4 3 4—32
In... 2 4 5 5 4 5 4 3 4—36—68

Among the entries for the National Capital Open received yesterday were those of Tom Kerrigan, Mount Vernon, N. Y.; Johnny Meyer, Shamokin, Pa., and Dick Hinkle, Pottsville, Pa.

Meanwhile, greens keepers are working feverishly, manicuring the layout for the big event.

When East Meets West

By Paul Gallico.

MEADOWBROOK CLUB, Westbury, Long Island, Sept. 19.—The polo ponies paraded before the start of the matches. The polo players did not. This is the one sport where the animal is as important, if not more so than the human beings involved.

Boeseke, Smith, Pedley and Roark were over on the No. 2 field back of the west stand, warming up and batting the ball around when the blue uniformed band swept by the grandstand. Then came men bearing large banners with "East" or "West," and behind them men with small banners with the names of the players. Behind these walked the braided and blanketed ponies, each one led by a groom or sais, as we used to say in India. The ponies picked their feet up prettily and stepped in time to the music, nodded their heads and seemed neither nervous nor excited.

The West stand, where society sits, was well filled, but the East grandstand, the sunseats had only small irregular patches of spectators. With all the steam-up and postponements and memories of the riotous East-West games in Chicago last year, the people still stayed away.

$11 for Seat in Stand.

The tariff is a little stiff going from $2.20 for general admission to $11 for a single seat in the Gold Coast pews. But if the boys around Broadway, who like to see fast stuff, rough stuff, hair-raising stuff, only know what polo was like they wouldn't miss it. At that, we had to fight our way through Rolls Royces to get near the gate. Maybe that's what makes the crowd shy.

I am a little suspicious of this polo myself. After being tossed around at Forest Hills, bounced around at Brookline, ritzed at Newport, I arrived here and was smiled at by the gateman who said "good afternoon, fine day isn't it?" A director said—"Press? May I help you find your seat?" An usher said, "right this way sir, the press box is right up there."

What are these people here, sissies? Don't they know how to insult the varlets of the press and toss them around like the rest of the smart clubs? The trouble is that a lot of gentlemen are involved in this polo business. Some one in charge instructed all gatemen and officials to be courteous, something practically unheard of in the annals of American sport.

Turf Is Slippery.

The wet field played hob with the game. The ponies were unable to turn quickly on the loose, slippery turf, and after three minutes of playing the field, which at the start looked like the biggest and finest golf green in the world, was chopped up into a million divots along which the ball jumped, bounded and kicked, making accurate hitting almost impossible. Instead of having the ball spinning truly over level turf and being able to time their swings to the line and speed, the ball, the players of both teams were slashing at a jack rabbit that skipped and jiggled off line at every turn.

Like all grudge matches this one didn't come off. If the boys were mad at one another they didn't show it. With great good sense and no little taste it seemed that they decided to make a polo match out of it and fight it out on that basis. I always distrust grudge affairs any way, because nobody can be mad and be good at anything. As soon as you get sore, your efficiency drops 50 per cent, whether it is polo or parchesi. The East wasn't actually waving a handkerchief at the West in the rideoffs and bumpings, but there was nothing vicious or unusual.

Western Ponies Superior.

One thing was immediately evident even on the wet, chopped-up field, and that was the superiority of the Western mounts over the imported Eastern horses. The Western horses are American animals, cow ponies and Texas horses, the Eastern animals are mostly imported from England and the Argentine. From where I sat the East seemed to be playing the better polo, but the West was getting to the ball much faster, an important feature of any polo game, since you cannot take a clout at the ball until you get there. Time after time, the Western horses overcame leads of one and two lengths and beat the East to the ball. The East had the team play, and great slugging by Mike Phipps, who semed to be the most accurate hitter on the field. But how those Western cow ponies would make up ground.

Picturesque were the Argentine grooms, in the baggy black trousers stuffed into shiny boots, white shirts and neck cloths and guacho hats. . . . The varlets and serfs who rushed out onto the field, a busy but disorderly rabble, at each pause, replaced the divots as best they could, trampling them down with their feet. . . . Inside of ten seconds the field would be covered with them. . . . At the whistle they all rushed off stage like opera mobs. . . . The aeroplanes that filled the sky over the field, soaring up from both Roosevelt and Mitchell Fields that border the polo field. . . . Old Mal Stevens, once one of the greatest backs in the game, bouncing around the field as referee, . . . The solo goal of Cecil Smith, escorted all the way down the field by Winston Guest, in which Smith hit the ball four times and finally slammed it through.

The excitement in the stands when four goals behind, due to the individual work of Cecil Smith, the East scored three times in the seventh chukker, inside of three minutes and then tied the score at 8—8 in the next 30 seconds. It was the fastest scoring I have ever seen, one right after the other with the West bewildered and caught up and hypnotized by the rhythm of it. The thrill when the East scored two more and went ahead, 10 to 8. Experts said the East's comback in the seventh chukker was one of the greatest ever seen in polo.

Headley's Colt Is Winner at Rockingham

Fraidy Cat Wins Purse on Wet Track; Universe Also Features.

ROCKINGHAM PARK, Salem, N. H., Sept. 19 (AP).—Hal Price Headley's Fraidy Cat and T. M. Cassidy's Universe shared the honors of the public welfare day program before 10,000 rain-defying spectators today as they captured the features in brilliant finishes which saw the favorites out of the money.

Fraidy Cat, second choice in the betting in the top event, the $2,500 Belknap Handicap for 2-year-olds, earned $1,970 for his owner as the gelding, by Apprehension out of Sister Emble, raced the favorite, Percy Pike's Time Flight, into submission in the battle to the turn for home, then had enough to stave off the challenge of Max Hirsch's Roman Soldier, by a neck.

Brancastle Farm's Cloud Sweeper nosed out Time Flight, which had carried wide at the turn, and then bumped by Fraidy Cat, for the show money.

Challenges Time Flight.

Time Flight, with a top impost of 122 pounds, broke away from the gate first and disposed of the lesser competition in the first furlong. In the meantime Fraidy Cat moved up fast, challenged Time Flight as they left the stretch and the two raced together until their mishap on the turn for the stretch for home.

Universe was the big surprise of the day, paying more than 13 to 1, the pari mutuel being $29.20 for the $2 win ticket, as the 5-year-old horse ran a front race to win the American Handicap, a sprint for older horses, and beating the 9-year-old My Dandy, the 13-2 outsider, owned by W. C. Reichert.

My Dandy, eased back after the first sixteenth and thereby losing much ground, came fast in the stretch to pass Mrs. A. A. Baroni's Bamboula, the second choice in the money, for the place pay off. It was expected that the charities of New Hampshire would receive more than $35,000 as a result of the day's racing.

Loughran Arrives In South America

Buenos Aires, Sept. 19 (AP).—Tommy Loughran, American heavyweight, arrived on the steamer Western World today for his South American campaign.

His first opponent will be Jose Caratoli, the Argentnie light-heavyweight champion next month. Later he may meet Victorio Campolo and other heavies.

Shikat Ready To Meet Bout Winner

Issues Challenge to Victor in Marshall-Dusek Match Tonight.

HERR DIREKTOR RICHARD SHIKAT, one of the directors of the W. O. O. F. Y.—World Order of Ferocious Yankers—yesterday projected his dumdum-shaped cranium into the local wrestling spotlight by flinging a challenge at the winner of the Everett Marshall-Ernie Dusek snarl which graces Griffith Stadium tonight.

What with Herr Direktor's high position in the WOOFY's his acknowledged position in the mat world, and the fact that someone will have to wrestle the winner of tonight's feature (for some reason or another), it is generally believed that the Herr Direktor's challenge will be accepted.

Just who will emerge from the Marshall-Dusek exhibition to accept Herr Direktor Shikat's challenge, is, of course, a secret known only to the board of directors of the WOOFY's, but in view of the fact that Marshall was elected to go to a draw with both Ed (Don) George and Jim Browning, he has been installed a favorite to down Earnest Ernie.

Dusek's Record Good.

Save for several bursts of artistic temperament which resulted in his being disqualified, Dusek has a record as good as Marshall's here. He has been downed locally only by Chompeen Jeems Londos. In this respect he boasts a slight edge over Earnest Ernie, having lasted exactly 58 minutes with the Gorgeous Greek, whereas Dusek rendered himself hors de combat by missing a flying tackle aimed at Londos exactly half an hour after they started to work.

If both contestants live up to their advance growling, tonight's shambles will be a thing of beauty and a joy forever to lovers of unmitigated mayhem. Both have sworn to tear each other asunder, dismantle each other, piece by piece, and indulge in other antics for the edification of the elite. If they wrestle the match they have been talking, only the S. P. C. A. (Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Actors) can prevent a casualty.

Earl McCready, a smooth-working mat maneuverer, will pit his skill against Richard Stahl, the German dynamo, in a 45-minute semifinal. Thirty-minute preliminaries will bring together Eli Fischer and Bert Rubi Karl Sarpolis and Henry Graber and Ivan Vacturoff and Vic Christy.

Pelicans Score 3-2 Win In 2d Tilt With Nashville

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 19 (AP).—The New Orleans Pelicans headed for home tonight all even in the Southern Association playoff series with Nashville, by virtue of a 3-to-2 victory in the second game here this afternoon.

There was no seventh-inning 19-run fireworks today, as there was yesterday, but thrills were provided by a reserve Pelican catcher, Charles "Greek" George, who hit safely all four times he went to bat.

Nashville's team will leave tomorrow for New Orleans to play the remaining games of the possible five-game series on the Pel's home grounds.

Brother Battery Draws Suspension

Ferrell Boys Also Must Pay for Umpire Row.

St. Louis, Sept. 19 (AP).—Wesley and Rick Ferrell, the Boston Red Sox's brother battery, were notified today they had been suspended for five and three days, respectively, for a run-in with Umpire Kolls here yesterday.

Wesley Ferrell kicked so hard after he had been called out on strikes that Kolls put him out of the game. Rick Ferrell then became involved in the argument, and he, too, was ejected.

A $100 fine also was assessed against each of the brothers.

Jewelers vs. Grays.

Ross Jewelers and Mount Rainier Grays will play off their postponed game Saturday at 3 o'clock on the Ellipse. Should the Grays beat the Jewelers, they meet the Potomac A. C. on Sunday for the second half title in the District Independent League.

Vote on Wager Bill.

Austin, Tex., Sept. 19 (AP).—A bill to repeal the law legalizing the pari-mutuel system of wagering on horse races was reported favorably today by the criminal jurisprudence committee on the Texas House of Representatives. The vote was 9 to 2.

Basketball Club to Meet.

The Lawrence Club, unlimited basketball players, will meet tomorrow night at 8 o'clock, at the home of Bob McCormac, 721 Ninth street northwest. Lisles and McBride are requested to communicate with V. M. Lawrence at District 4090.

Stocks Rally Along Widest Front in Weeks

Brokers Lay Advance to Technical Factors; Sales, 556,780 Shares.

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—A recovery in stocks picked up momentum today as security markets displayed the broadest strength in several weeks.

Gains of 1 to 3 points were numerous among leading shares. U. S. Smelting & Refining spurted for a net gain of 5 points, now having recovered about 12 points of its recent slump.

The rally was carried on from the preceding session without notable increase in volume. The turnover was 556,780, shares against 541,700 yesterday.

Advance Is Explained.

Brokers ascribed the advance chiefly to technical factors, pointing out that the decline in share prices from the late August tops to the end of last week warranted a sizable rebound.

Improvement in sentiment in financial quarters derived no small part of its nourishment from a brisk rise in bonds, covering virtually the entire list, United States Government and foreign issues, as well as corporate loans. South American bonds encountered considerable speculative buying.

Stocks crept ahead most of the session, closing around best levels. American Can, Santa Fe, American Telephone, California Packing, Bethlehem Steel, Continental Can, J. I. Case, Johns Manville, Spiegel-May-Stern, Union Pacific, Western Union and U. S. Steel were among shares moving up 1 to 3 points.

All Sections Advance.

All sections of the list participated in the advance. Bulls were cheered particularly by the rally in rail shares from their 1934 lows touched last week.

The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 selected stocks was lifted 1.7 points, to 69.4, the largest advance since August 21. The rally in bonds was the broadest in more than a month.

Traders shifted to the buying side of the market in view of the resistance shown on last week's test of the year's lowest levels established July 26.

Gold Currencies Firmer.

Gold currencies were a trifle firmer against the dollar, but the advance in United States Government bonds and the lack of interest in commodities indicated the lid was still down on the recent inflation gossip.

Only mixed impressions could be gleaned from mid-week business news. The Iron Age estimated steel output had increased 1½ points, to 21 per cent of capacity, but noted that buyers were still so cautious that some were ordering in truckloads where ordinarily carload orders were expected.

Electric power production last week, while up more than 3 per cent, compared with the preceding Labor Day week, was ½ per cent under that of the corresponding period last year. Offsetting production figures partly were additional reports of seasonal expansion in retail trade and brightening sentiment in farm areas ravaged by drought last summer, but since benefited by soaking rains.

The Dollar Abroad

(Associated Press.)

Foreign exchange trading remained dull yesterday, with currency rates showing few changes.

The British pound dipped ⅜ of a cent in New York to $5.00½, while the dollar closed in London at 5.00 9-16 to the pound.

French francs were unchanged in New York at 6.67½ cents, and in London at 75 to the pound.

The price of gold in London advanced 2 pence to 140 shillings 8 pence a fine ounce (equivalent to $35.22), and bars valued at $926,387 were purchased.

Steel and Pig Iron Orders Point To Rise of Replacement Buying

Miscellaneous Business Fails to Indicate Initiation of Broad Autumn Upturn; Government Works' Purchasing Called Hope of Industry.

New York, Sept. 19.—Miscellaneous orders for both steel and pig iron have increased moderately, but they reflect a growth of replacement purchases rather than the initiation of a broad fall upturn.

In at least two important market centers finished steel bookings thus far this month remain smaller than for the corresponding period last month, and where there is a margin over August it is not of impressive proportions. So cautious are buyers in placing business that orders for truckloads are being placed where carload orders would be ordinarily expected. The necessity of waiting for bookings of this type to accumulate has accentuated the irregularity of mill operations.

In the absence of a seasonal upswing in buying, Government-financed construction work, doubtless expedited because of the current business setback, looms larger as a sustaining force in the market. Bids go in next week on 15,000 tons of reinforcing bars for the Fort Peck dam.

Building for New York.

On October 2, figures will be taken on a Government office building and postoffice in New York requiring 17,000 tons of structural steel. Two units of the Colorado River aqueduct, one of which will come up for tenders October 11 and the other shortly thereafter, call for upward of 80,000 tons of steel.

Bridge, wharf and tunnel improvements in the Pittsburgh district, just authorized and scheduled to go ahead by December 1, will take 50,000 tons. In addition, the initial purchase of 25,000 tons of wire fencing for the Great Plains shelter belt is due in October. These major tonnages, suplemented by numerous smaller ones, form an imposing total.

Fabricated structural steel awards of the past week, at 17,650 tons, are almost double those of the previous week. The outstanding letting, 5,235 tons, was for a private project, the Fisher-Chevrolet assembly plant at Baltimore. Plate awards total 1,500 tons.

Steel Rail Production.

Rail production has virtually ceased in the North, but the Alabama mill will start up next week on 2,000 tons for a Southern Railway subsidiary. The Pennsylvania and the Norfolk & Western will take Clayton act bids September 26 on their fourth quarter steel requirements, amounting to 5,000 tons and 4,500 tons, respectively.

No broad revival of railroad buying is looked for unless a new program of Government-financed work is launched under pressure from the Administration.

Automobile company purchases of steel have been limited to additional fill-in orders for current models. Ford has bought steel to balance short items for 13,500 cars, while Chevrolet has issued releases of steel and parts for commercial cars and trucks, although canceling orders for passenger car parts. Purchases of automobile steel are not likely to develop in real volume for another month or two. Production of automobile bodies is being impeded by nondelivery of upholstering material because of the textile strike.

Tin Plat Business.

Tin plate business continues to show contraseasonal buoyancy, both because of export orders and Government meat packing activities. Tin mill operations have risen from 40 to 45 per cent of capacity.

The reaffirmation of the present domestic tin plate price for fourth quarter is of little moment, since the next large buying movement will be for 1935, and it will not get under way until prices for next year are announced. And there is not likely to be much anticipatory rolling of 1935 tin plate, since large users are in a waiting mood, sensing the possibility of a price change to their advantage.

The same spirit of expectancy is evident among buyers in general, and they have been encouraged in this attitude by recent price developments. Bolts and nuts, which are not under the steel code, have been reduced about 15 per cent. Scrap, notwithstanding an expanding export demand, has declined from $9.67 to $9.58 a ton, a new low for the year. A Detroit producer of cold-rolled strip has filed a price of 2.35 cents a pound, a reduction of $5 a ton from the previous minimum quotation.

Reaffirming of Prices.

While prices of most products have been reaffirmed without change for the fourth quarter, such action has no significance under the code except as a guarantee against advances. Reductions can be filed at any time. Whether or not the waiting attitude of the trade is justified, it must be conceded that the weakness in cold-rolled strip stands by itself. For some time strip mills have suffered because users discovered that they could economize by buying wide cold-finished sheets and slitting them.

Steel ingot production has risen 1½ points to 21 per cent of capacity. Detroit continues to lead the country with an unchanged rate of 76 per cent. Operations have risen 2 points to 13 per cent at Pittsburgh, 2 points to 25 per cent in the Valleys, 6 points to 21 per cent at Cleveland and 5 points to 24 per cent at Buffalo. The Chicago rate is off 2 points to 22 per cent, and production at other centers is substantially unchanged.

The Iron Age composite prices for finished steel and pig iron are unchanged at 2.124 cents a pound and $17.90 a ton.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Prices on the stock exchange were firmer today, with British funds touching new high records with good buying. Foreign bonds were strong. Industrial shares featured the trading. Austin Motors 5-shilling shares rose 20 shillings, to 142 shillings 6 pence, on the announcement of a 100 per cent dividend and a 300 per cent scrip bonus, closing at 135 shillings. Transatlantic shares were harder, while other sections remained quiet. The closing tone was firm.

Paris—Prices on the bourse were weak today in a session wherein gold mines were the only issues to gain. The closing was heavy.

Berlin—After a friendly opening, the boerse weakened and prices declined and the market closed quiet.

Bond Market Renews Climb Under Buying

All Domestic Issues Join List of Gains; Sales, $11,744,000.

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—A revival of buying interest brought a more cheerful tone to the bond market today. All classes of domestic issues, from United States Governments to the speculative ratings of the corporate list, participated in the best advance the market has enjoyed in about a month. Foreign obligations improved also.

Trading volume rose a little over that of yesterday, but it was smaller than the average dealings of last week, which were compiled on a declining market.

The total sales amounted to $11,744,000, par value, compared with $11,517,000 on Tuesday. The Standard Statistics Co. average price of 60 domestic corporate issues gained three-tenths of a point.

Leading Government List.

Leading the upward movement in the Government list were Home Owners Loan 3s and 4s, up 10-32ds and 11-32ds of a point, to 95.02 and 95.21, respectively; Federal Farm Mortgage 3s, up 11-32ds, at 95.25; Liberty Loans 3½s, up 11-32ds, at 101.21; Treasury 4¼s, up 7-32ds, at 100.9, and Treasury 4¼s of 1941, up 4-32ds, at 101.18.

Railroad obligations showed a complete reversal of recent action by moving up briskly.

Gains of 1 to 2 points lifted Alleghany Corporation 5s of 1949 to 51; American & Foreign Power to 48¼, American Rolling Mill 5s '59, 102½, Baltimore & Ohio refunding 6s to 75, Central Pacific first 4s to 91⅝, Chesapeake & Ohio 4½s to 101, Chicago & North Western General 5s to 60.

Also Among Gainers.

Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis 4½s to 69⅜, Erie General Lien 4s to 67, Great Northern 7s to 85, International Telephone 5s to 53½, Nickel Plate 6s to 59, Northern Pacific 6s to 88⅛, Pennsylvania debenture 4½s to 86, Southern Railway 5s to 93, Union Pacific 1st 4s to 104⅞, and Wheeling Steel 5½s to 92½.

Another buoyant rise in South American issues was the principal feature of the foreign list.

Brazilian government obligations were leaders, showing gains of 2 points or more. Colombian, German, British loans were also traded at higher levels.

Dried Fruits Steady.

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—DRIED FRUITS—Steady, unchanged.

Curb's Prices Forge Ahead; Activity Rises

Metals, Oils, Alcohols and Specialties Up; Trading, 126,000 Shares.

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—The curb list again forged ahead today in slightly more active trading. A number of substantial advances were recorded among metals, oils, alcohols and specialties.

Prices rallied in the first hour. A lull followed, during which quotations receded slightly, but the upward trend was resumed in the final hour and the majority of shares ended around their best levels.

Lake Shore Mines rose 2⅜ points. In the inactive list similar gains were recorded by General Tire & Rubber, Columbia Gas & Electric convertible preferred and Sherwin Williams.

Singer Manufacturing soared 5 points on the appearance of the annual report for 1933, which showed earnings of $12.03 a share, against $2.68 a share in 1932.

Humble Oil rose 2, while advances of around a point or more were shown by Hiram Walker, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Hollinger Gold, Newmont, Gulf Oil, International Petroleum, Dow Chemical and Swift Internacional.

Leading utilities, including Electric Bond & Share and American Gas & Electric, finished narrow, as did American Cyanamid B, Wright Hargreaves and Pioneer Gold.

Transfers approximated 126,000 shares, compared with 112,000 Tuesday.

Power Production Rises During Week

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Electrical power output last week totaled 1,633,683,000 kilowatt hours, compared with 1,564,867,000 kilowatt hours the previous week, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

The decrease from a year ago was 1.8 per cent, compared with a decrease of 1.1 the week before.

Regional changes last week from 1933 were:

New England, a loss of 11.6 per cent, compared with a loss of 6.6 the week before; Middle Atlantic, a gain of 0.5, compared with a gain of 0.9; central industrial, a loss of 3.9, compared with a loss of 3.9; west central, a gain of 0.6, compared with a gain of 2.5; Southern, a loss of 4.4, compared with a loss of 1.2; Rocky Mountain, a loss of 8.0, compared with a loss of 9.2; Pacific Coast, a gain of 9.2, compared with a gain of 10.8.

Gossip of New York Markets

By Claude A. Jagger.

Ne wYork, Sept. 19 (AP).—The securities and exchange commission has been giving every indication of late that it wants to see securities markets resume their functions of providing capital to industry.

Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman, visiting the stock exchange yesterday, asserted it is not the desire of the commission to "clamp down" on the markets, that it seeks constructive regulation. He disclaimed responsibility for the current dullness of the markets, saying that the commission has not taken an obstructive attitude.

And it has also been announced recently that the commission, which has just taken over the administration of the securities act from the Federal Trade Commission, is trying to redraw the requirements for the filing of information on new issues to make them more "practical."

Wall street, however, is maintaining an attitude of extreme dubiousness. Trading in stocks continues at about the average volume of a decade or more ago, when the amount of listed issues was much smaller. Leading investment bankers are not offering new issues of corporate securities.

Brokers and bankers acknowledge that there is much in what Chairman Kennedy says about other factors tending to restrict business. Nevertheless, many insist that regulation is an outstanding factor. In the stock market it is not so much what the commission has already done, they say, as what the commission may do.

Wall street does not know, as yet, what the commission will consider legitimate trading, and what it will regard as manipulation. Professional traders, in the main, do not care to take chances. They know that these antimanipulation rules do not take effect until October 1, and may not be ready then, but they do not want to start any operation now that they may not be able to finish later.

Furthermore, the law that any profit made by an "insider," that is, an officer or director or holder of 10 per cent or more of an issue, must be turned back to the corporation if the stock is bought and sold within six months, has big traders and investment houses worried. A trader or an investment banking house, after October 1, must watch its dealings in a small issue very carefully, or it will find itself with more than 10 per cent of the issue, and come under the rule.

Underwriting houses still find corporate managements and owners leary of the regulations and liabilities of the securities act. They say it would take literally thousands of pages of statistics and information for a company as far-flung as, say, the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, or the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., to state all of the facts that might be considered material to an issue of securities. And furthermore, they say the liabilities of the act are such as still to stand as an invitation to chislers to bring nuisance casese on technicalities.

Nevertheless, the strenuous work of the commission of late to smooth out red tape and draft workable regulations has inspired new hope in much of the investment community.

SEC Continues Market Survey

Of the money borrowed by farmers from production credit associations this year, over $6,300,000 was repaid before September 1, according to a statement yesterday by C. R. Arnold, deputy production credit commissioner of the Farm Credit Administration.

"The largest part of the loans of the associations," Mr. Arnold said, "were made this spring with maturities of a year or less, and are not yet due; but favorable marketing conditions in many sections are encouraging farmers to make repayments from the earliest sale of cash crops; and they will save considerable on interest by doing so."

Up to September 1, over $55,000,000 had been loaned to farmers this year by production credit associations, not including commitments of $13,000,000; and $6,368,000 repaid, or more than 11 per cent.

Wheat Sinks On Argentine Export Menace

Fears Unsettle Market; Corn and Oats Join Downward Drift.

Chicago, Sept. 19 (AP).—Fears that Argentine wheat exports would overflow into the United States led to material setbacks of all grain prices today in Chicago.

Announcement that Argentine wheat, duty paid, could be laid down in New York as cheap as United States red winter wheat had a decidedly unsettling market influence.

A curious effect was that September, December and May wheat futures in Chicago all closed today at virtually identical quotations, something said to be without precedent here and resulting in complete elimination of carrying charges on deferred deliveries.

Wheat Closes Weak.

Wheat closed weak, near the day's bottom level, ⅞ to 1⅜ under yesterday's finish; December new, 1.03⅛@1.03¼; corn, ⅝ to 1¼ down; December new, 76½@76⅝; oats, ⅜ to ⅞ off, and provisions unchanged to 12 cents decline.

Acute weakness of the Liverpool wheat market added impetus to downturns of prices here. The Liverpool market was disturbed by poor grading of old Argentine wheat on delivery and by rains in Argentina regarded as bearish, as well as Argentine offerings showing a break of 3¼ cents a bushel. With the Liverpool may delivery of wheat falling today to a new low price record for the season, Liverpool reported general liquidation in progress on wheat holdings in all positions.

May Wheat Drops.

May wheat contracts bore the brunt of selling here, and dropped to the lowest quotations since July 27. Uncertainty as to next year's domestic crop accounted more or less for relative weakness of the May future.

Widespread recent rains have improved seeding conditions in United States winter wheat territory, and farmers are reported planning to increase their acreage. On the other hand, mills were credited with buying wheat futures on today's price breaks, and Minneapolis messages told of selling of December wheat there against purchases in Chicago.

Corn and oats sympathized with wheat weakness, and were responsive to slowness of shipping demand for corn.

Despite hog market upturns, provisions tended downgrade with cereals.

Outlook for Industries Called Above Average

Boston, Sept. 19.—Near term earnings prospects are now considered better than average in eight leading industries, says the United Business Service. These are building supplies, can manufacturing, chemicals, dairy products, meat packing, office equipment, sugar and tobacco.

Most of these lines are favorably affected by the recent rise in prices of their products. Building suppliers are benefiting from public works projects, as well as Federal loans to industrias and home owners. Chemical companies continue to be favored by a firm demand.

Continental Can Co. Meeting Set Oct. 15

Stockholders Called to Vote on 50 Per Cent Share Dividend.

New York, Sept. 19.—Continental Can Co., Inc., today mailed to stockholders of record a letter calling a special meeting on October 15 to vote on the 50 per cent stock dividend recently proposed by the directors. Under the plan, the authorized capital stock will be increased from 2,000,000 shares of $20 par value to 3,000,000 shares of $20 par value and a 50 per cent stock dividend paid to holders of record at the close of business October 15.

This would result in a total outstanding issue of 2,665,191 shares, the remainder of the increased capital, consisting of 334,809 shares, being reserved for future corporate purposes.

"It is the expectation of the board that, after the declaration of the stock dividend, the initial quarterly cash dividend will be 60 cents per share as compared with the present quarterly cash dividend of 75 cents per share upon the stock now outstanding," the letter states.

Culbertson on Bridge

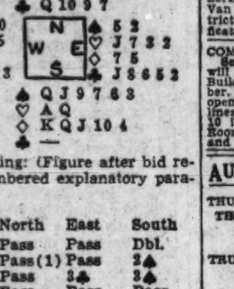
A Secret Passage.

It is seldom safe for any player to base his plan of defense upon the assumption that the Dummy contains no card of entry. Unless he is careful he will find that some helpless-looking small card can be turned by a clever Declarer into a trick winner, and the weakest-looking Dummy will suddenly have the right to lead.

Last month, in an important tournament, a famous player lost a game because, holding the Ace of a suit, he played a small card when Declarer led toward the Ten of that suit in Dummy. It turned out that the Declarer held K Q J x, so the Ten won the trick and Dummy was in the lead to cash five established cards in another suit of which the Declarer was void.

A similar catastrophe for the defense occurred on the following deal:

West, Dealer:
North-South vulnerable.



The bidding: (Figure after bid refers to numbered explanatory paragraph.)

West	North	East	South
1♣	Pass	Pass	Dbl.
Redbl.	Pass (1)	Pass	2♠
Dbl.	Pass	3♣	3♠
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—North, being too weak to play at the redoubled one-club contract, should have bid one heart.

West was overjoyed at his opportunity to double the three-spade bid. North and South were vulnerable, and it seemed to West that he should be able to win seven tricks for a penalty of 900 points.

His spirits were somewhat dampened when his opening lead of the club King was ruffed by South's spade 3. He still felt certain that he would defeat the contract, however. South led the spade Queen, which West won with the King. Now West could not lead a spade without giving up a trick, nor a heart without leading into a tenace. Being convinced (on general principles) that East held something in diamonds—perhaps the Queen—he did not want lead a diamond. But he seemed safe enough in leading the club Ace. This would establish Dummy's Queen, but it did not occur to West that it would help South, because there seemed to be no card by which North could get the lead.

Actually, of course, there was not, but West on the next lead created one. South ruffed the second club lead and played the diamond 4. West joyously played the diamond 6 so that East could get in and lead to his heart King. Dummy's diamond 9 therefore won the trick, and South promptly discarded his heart Queen upon the club Queen. Now another spade was led, and West could take only three more tricks—two spades and the Ace of diamonds. He tried to run South out of trumps by cashing his two spades and leading a club. On Dummy's club Ten East played the Jack and South ruffed with his last spade. But now, after West took the Ace of diamonds, he had to lead either a heart to South's Ace or a diamond, and the established diamond suit accounted for the rest of the tricks.

Tomorrow's Hand.

South, Dealer
Neither side vulnerable

Walt Mason

Old Dog Towser.

Old Dog Towser will escort you, he'll protect you and defend you; when all other agents thwart you, he is still your faithful friend; human guys may seem disgusted when you're down and out and busted, but old Towser may be trusted to stay with you to the end. If you are a gay carouser in the halls of dazzling light, you can bank on Old Dog Towser, he will hang around all night; there'll be no reproachful glances as the ribald night advances; that old dog will take his chances, everything you do is right. When in gilded state you're gliding, in your limousine so neat, chesty Towser will be riding, doubtless, in the rearmost seat; when from high estate you've tumbled and you're feeling cheap and humbled, one affection hasn't crumbled, Towser thinks you're good as wheat. When misfortunes pelt and whip you, falling on you like the rain, when the sheriff comes to strip you, with his deputies in train, when affliction sets you reeling and all things have hit the ceiling, Old Dog Towser will be feeling that you're strictly safe and sane. Human skates may scorn and flout you, when you've lost your cherished wad, but your dog can't do without you, you're his little shining god; he will trot along before you, he will never chide or bore you, he will cherish and adore you till they plant you 'neath the sod. When, all tired and disenchanted, from this sad life you depart, and are taken, to be planted, in the undertaker's cart; human friends will do no sighing; on their errands they'll be flying; but old Towser will be dying, dying of a broken heart.

YOU MUST BE HAPPY. I HEARD YOU WHISTLING ALL THE WAY COMING UPSTAIRS.
WELL JO, I HIRED A LAWYER TODAY THAT CAN SCREAM JUST AS LOUDLY AS THE PROSECUTING ATTORNEY WHO'LL BE IN IKE'S CORNER DURING THE TRIAL.
REG U.S.PAT.OFF. 9-20
GEORGE, BEFORE YOU SAY ONE MORE WORD I KNOW YOU'RE TALKING ABOUT THAT NOISY A. BAXTER BUMM.
BY NOISY YOU MEAN HE HOLLERS AS MUCH DURING THE TRIAL AS THE AVERAGE LAWYER DOES AFTER THE JURY BRINGS IN BAD NEWS.
HE'S THE MAN WHO GOT MY SISTER, HIS OWN CLIENT, SO MIXED-UP AT THE TRIAL OF THAT MAN WHO WRECKED HER CAR
HE LOST THAT CASE BECAUSE YOUR SISTER'S HUSBAND, LOUIE, WHO TOOK A WEEK END COURSE IN MAIL ORDER LAW, ARGUED WITH THE JUDGE.
GEORGE THAT MAN IS NO GOOD FOR ANYTHING EXCEPT, I'D SAY, TO HELP SOMEONE WHO WAS TRAINING FOR A HOG CALLING CONTEST.
THAT LOUD STUFF IS ONLY PART OF HIS ABILITY. YOU SHOULD SEE HIM CRY. REAL TEARS, TOO. HE DOESN'T USE AN ONION, EITHER. YES SIR, HE'S PLENTY OKAY.

Radio Waves and Ripples

By George M. Adams, Jr.

FOUR hundred and ninety-nine tinted portraits of Dick Powell, C. B. S.'s curly-haired charmer, will be bestowed free to lassies in honor of the arrival tomorrow of Mr. Powell himself at the Earle. (The 500th portrait was snitched by this department.)

Dick's admirers are expected to attend Tuesday's matinee from 1 to 4 p. m., however, to obtain the coveted likenesses. It's sort of a mean trick, though, as Dick's present contract with Warner Brothers provides that he must not make those goo-goo eyes of his at any one girl . . . with serious intentions to wed. There may be a reversal of this decision. We'll see.

He's been good enough to sing in choirs, at weddings, funerals and baptisms, with a boys' orchestra and on the radio with Ted Fiorito . . . so Dick may sign the portraits.

* * * *

BILLY COYLE saunters down the Ted Husing-Eddie Dooley path with his "Gridiron Reporter" series on WMAL at 6:45 p. m. You'll miss something worth while in local football commentation if you pass this one up.

For quite some time Billy has been seen with official-looking manuals under his arm, bunches of sports clippings and traces of locker room jocularity . . . proving that N. B. C.'s leading sports light is ready to keep listeners completely posted on football developments.

Jim Pixlee, football coach at G. W., will be Billy's guest on today's opening and will relate all he knows about his boys and the chances of kicking up plenty turf this fall. Coyle will continue on Thursdays with similar guest speakers. His Saturday night session on the same spot will offer complete scores, comment on the high lights of current games and real warm dope on what's coming up.

But it being a perfect polo day yesterday, Billy was in the throes of mallets and chukkers as he sped to East Potomac Park to report the U. S. Army-Mexican Army contest.

PEOPLE who want to hear world news have to bow to "diamond chatter," writes a reader who "hates to have false hopes raised."

The false hopes were raised in this department when it was announced in our program schedule and column that H. V. Kaltenborn, the news analyst, would discuss "Will War Come?," over WJSV last week at 5 p. m. Properly aroused over the prospect of having that question settled, this reader tuned in and found "diamond chatter" by none other than our portly sports announcer, Arch McDonald, who was reporting some baseball game or other at that hour.

"Baseball seems to have a 99-year lease . . . it seems a pity that Washington has to pass up Kaltenborn for this baseball business. There are many who are not fans and who hate to have false hopes raised," finishes our correspondent.

The explanation of this hinges on the fact that C. B. S. has to "pass up" many network programs while baseball is on the air. They never know how long a baseball broadcast will last and they've found by past experiment that the moment baseball goes off the air people swamp their station with protesting calls. So Arch just keeps on reading his wire bulletins as long as they come in, and it's a tough break for Kaltenborn et al who happen to be on Columbia air during that time.

ONE who signs himself "Radio Groggy" is slightly disturbed over that catch-all of radiodium often assembled and tossed at the air in what is known and gloated over as a benefit performance.

"Last Saturday night N. B. C. broke out," writes "Radio Groggy," "in another one of its weird rashes and served us warmed-over rehash of an otherwise good Thursday night's radio meal, the Showboat. Many like that hour and its able entertainers and look forward to it each week, but when a flimsy likeness of it is paraded before the microphone only two nights later in the most flawlessly disconnected and pointless manner . . . this listener rises to kick."

Whew! This laddie must listen to the Showboat. He continues:

"Nothing is more boresome than benefit performances where able entertainers are rushed on display with no adequate background or routine at all, just because they are who they are. Miss Dragonette is elected for this coming Saturday night's warmed over remnants of Friday night's radio supper. We like her, but not such a set-up."

Here the groggy person pleads with Miss Dragonette to leave the "rut of unchanged routine . . . and try something new or different that might prove a blessing in disguise." He wants her to kick up her heels and depart from her usual manner just to enliven her guest appearance.

We sort of sympathize with "Radio Groggy" and after many faint attempts to solve the question in hand we always gave the dial a gentle twist to another spot . . . which is about all that can be done.

BLACKIE BEAR —Mr. Man Just Listens

By D. SAM COX

When Mr. Man came in with such things as Jocko had left in the wagon, Mrs. Man didn't pay any attention to what he had. And when he started to tell his troubles, he couldn't get a word in edgeways. Mrs. Man was wound up, and from the way she kept telling Mr. Man about the day's doings, it seemed like it was going to take her as long to run down as an eight-day clock.

"I had just got my dinner on the stove," she said, "when I heard the most awful noise that an owl ever made, and when I went to the door there was the biggest owl in the world picking up a chicken. And a man as big as—as big as—as big as a giant—oh, I know he was as high as the kitchen, and there he was running across the field, with a pig under one arm and a bag of my dried apples under the other. What on earth sort of a man goes around with coons and possums and owls and all sorts of wild animals and robs people like this? He must just have them trained to steal. He must be some sort of a circus man or something. And I looked at his tracks, and they are the same curious animal tracks that we have been seeing everywhere. I never saw any other tracks like them, and that man certainly was smart to have such shoes made. I never saw such a man in my life and I tell you he was as high as this kitchen. And he is the man that writes you notes and thanks you for barbecued pigs; but I don't know yet how he got that note thrown down on the table, and then got away without letting any of the cornshuckers see him. And what in the world they did to Rover Dog I don't know. He ran off after that big owl after he came and got the first chicken and flew off toward the woods, but it wasn't long before I heard him howl like somebody had hit him with a brick, and pretty soon he came stumbling back with his eyes running water so he could hardly see and sneezing like he had the worst cold in the world. He has been like something half dead all the afternoon, and I couldn't get him to move a foot after these robbers. And to think of those possums and coons, and I don't know how many other sorts of animals, coming here right in the middle of the day, and taking all of those things! That giant of a man certainly knew that you had gone away and that you took the gun and that I had nothing to shoot him with. Who on earth could have told him? He must have been hid around here somewhere this morning when you left. And just to think that I was right here alone."

Mrs. Man hadn't cried a single whimper all day, mad and lonely as she had been; but now that it was all over and there was somebody to tell her troubles to and to be sorry for her, she broke down and cried as bad as Rover Dog did when he got back from the pepper party. But Mr. Man petted her up and told her that he had brought her something from town, and not to cry, for he wouldn't go away and leave her again. Foolish, wasn't it, for he would certainly have to leave her again, but it would help to say that tonight anyway. Then he gave her the bag of candy he got in town, and so she wiped her eyes, and soon had supper ready. Nobody who is having a good supper can worry as much as they did when they were hungry, and there was no sign of tears in Mrs. Man's eyes by the time she sat down to her dinner. Even Rover, sitting in front of the store and rubbing his eyes, felt better. But Mr. Man, seeing tears still coming from the dog's eyes, was worried.
